Duce's 1,200 Fell in Spain For 'Culture,' Italian Says

Died to Keep Reds From Mediterranean, Nazi Congress Told.

Planes Roar Over As General Talks

Thousands Pour in at Nurnberg for Party's Annual Parley.

The European Situation.

France sped plans for a meeting of European powers at which 12 nations will be asked to order their submarines out of the Mediterranean while an "international navy" hunts down the mysterious submarines which have been attacking merchant vessels.

Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler were reported planning to formulate a bold front against communism at their meeting in Berlin.—Page 3.

In Spain, loyalist commanders said capture of strategic Belchite marked beginning of a "big push" to end the war.—Page 3.

'To Save Culture.'

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 5.—Gen. Alessandro Melchiori, representing the Italian ministry of press and propaganda, disclosed tonight in an address to the anti-Communist section of the fifth national Socialist congress that 1,200 Italian Blackshirts have been killed while fighting for Spanish insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Melichiori spoke as 500 German warplanes dipped low over Nurnberg, mecca of Nazidom, and, for duration of the eight-day congress, the political and military center of the nation.

The Nazi faithful poured into the city from endless trains. The tramp of thousands upon thousands of heavily-shod feet beat out a cobblestone rhythm to Nazi marching anthems. Trumpets and blaring loudspeakers announced beginning of the "congress of works."

Died to Exclude Reds.

Gen. Melchiori said the Blackshirts in Spain died "to save European culture and because they did not want to see a Bolshevist state get a toehold in the Mediterranean area."

Nazi-Fascist solidarity was the principal topic of conversation among the thousands of pilgrims who emptied trains with Prussian precision and repaired quickly to amusements and lodgings.

There was much dissussion of participation in the congress by Italian Fascists and the forthcoming visit of Mussolini to Hitler after the congress.

Nazi spokesmen said Il Duce's visit is intended to be more than "just another ordinary exchange of courtesies."

Troops Arrive.

Meanwhile, thousands of troops were arriving to lend a military air to the party congress. The regular army will be represented by 20,000 soldiers, one-fifth the total number allowed Germany under the Treaty of Versailles. There will be 116,000 Storm Troopers, 40,000 Arbeitdienst," or labor service workers, 45,000 Hitler Youths. About 600,000 will march before Hitler during the sessions.

The presidential salute and the ringing of the city's church bells will announce the Fuehrer's arrival will announce the Fuehrer's arrival.

The congress proper will be opened Tuesday when Hitler's proc- opened Tuesday.

Victor Over 8 Planes Tells of Spanish War

Frank Tinker (right), has just returned from Spain where he piloted war planes for the Loyalist forces. In his story of modern aerial combat he tells how Harold Dahl, another American now imprisoned as a spy, lost his wings and how "Tarzan," the German shepherd dog, barked to warn of the approach of enemy planes.

American Ace, Back From Service With Loyalists, Saw Crash of 'Whitey' Dahl, Now Facing Death in Rebel Prison.

Three weeks ago Frank Tinker was fighting with the Spanish loyalist air forces near Madrid.

Yesterday he was in Washington ready to tell his story because it might give his buddy, Harold "Whitey" Dahl, a better chance of escaping death in a rebel prison at Salamanca.

Tinker and Dahl flew together on July 13, the day Dahl was shot down behind enemy lines. In his skeleton diary, kept on the pages of an ordinary calendar, Tinker reports his friend's loss:

"Three flights to day, all escorting bombers. Ran into enemy bombers and chased them home, then M. G.'nd trenches. Second flight saw nothing, so again fixed up trenches. Third flight ran into entire enemy air force, one hour dog-fight. Shot down one new German monoplane bringing total up to six. At least ten enemy planes shot down and three of ours. One of them 'Whitey.'"

Behind the torn pages of Tinker's calendar diary are the guns, bombs dropping around the airfield, hours waiting under their

Roosevelt Stumps West In 2 Weeks

Will Invade States of 5 Court Foes Unless War Crisis Prevents.

Plans Few Speeches on Tour; Warns Americans to Leave China.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Aboard Yacht Indian, Sept. 5.—Unless the Sino-Japanese crisis prevents, President Roosevelt will head West late this month on a trip expected to carry the Supreme Court issue into home States of five Democratic Senators who opposed Mr. Roosevelt on that issue.

This became certain today when Mr. Roosevelt at a press conference aboard the storm-tossed yacht Potomac in Great Salt Pond, off Block Island, R. I., said he will leave for the Pacific Coast the week-end of September 18-20 unless war in the Far East forbids.

He will return to Hyde Park tomorrow from the current fishing trip and expects to leave for Washington about September 14 for his Constitution Day speech September 17 at the Monument Grounds.

Hyde Park, Then West.

It is expected the President will return to Hyde Park within two days after this speech, then set out on the Western trip, which may prove one of the turning points of his Administration.

At the press conference today Mr. Roosevelt said he will make no formal speeches and that there will be very little politics involved.

He likened it to his dust bowl tour, saying there would be more intake than outgo as far as speeches go, with a few informal talks. Sources close to the White House, however, indicated the trip would take the President across the home States of Senators Clark, of Missouri; Burke, of Nebraska; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; McCarran, of Nevada, and Wheeler, of Wyoming.

Warns Americans in China.

The same sources pointed to the feasibility of the President's indicating his preference for opponents of these Senators, at the same time avoiding any public statements which would impair the dignity of the Presidential office.

At the conference the President described the Sino-Japanese situation as an awful mess and said the 7,780 Americans still in China were staying at their own risk.

He reiterated the Administration is still on a 24-hour watching basis as far as invoking neutrality was concerned.

Special Session in Doubt.

He said the Americans still in China had been urged repeatedly to come out.

The President said he had reached no conclusions on a special session of Congress.

Asked about John L. Lewis' Friday night radio address taking the President to task for his attitude in the steel strike, the Chief Executive declined to comment.

His own Labor Day statement, made public last night and asserting "both sides have made mistakes" in recent industrial-labor strife, was prepared several days before Lewis went on the air.

3 Drowned, Auto Crashes Kill 7 As 100,000 Quit City for Holiday

Two men, Roy Butler, of Washington, and Arnold Calvin Wolfe, of Takoma Park, were killed yesterday when a beer parlor argument developed into a wild auto chase. The wreckage of their car is shown above.

Two Crushed to Death in Wild Ride After Beer Parlor Dispute Ends in a Fatal Race; Waders Die in Swift Current.

Death took no holiday yesterday as week-end fatalities in the Washington area piled up to 10, with another day yet to go. Seven were killed in traffic accidents and three were drowned.

Killed in traffic were:

Roy Butler, 20, 2 Sixth street southeast.

Arnold Calvin Wolfe, 22, 105 Flower avenue, Takoma Park.

Howard Sheetz, 21, Fairfax, Va.

Robert Johnson, 32, 921 Maryland avenue southwest.

W. F. Parker, 57, 1116 Twenty-fifth street northwest.

Mrs. Ellis A. Smouse, 55, 653 East Capitol street.

Clara Mae Shifflet, 11 months, Edgemere, Md.

Drowned were:

Robert E. Dove, 17, Hyattsville, Md.

Carroll Hayes, 21, Hyattsville, Md.

Joseph Francis Bell, Greenville avenue, Edgewood, Md.

Added to the death list yesterday was William Mearns, 74, a Government printer, of 914 Sixth street southwest, who died after being hit Thursday.

140 Dead Over Nation.

Labor Day week-end toll had mounted to at least 140 last night, according to the Associated Press, with automobile accidents accounting for 111 persons in 32 States.

Butler and Wolfe perished in an unusual accident which grew out of a beer parlor argument. They were chasing another carload of youths about 4 a. m. on the road from 'Big Push' Launched.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), Sept. 6.—Japan's hard-pressed war machine struck in three directions—by land, water and air—today in the long-awaited "big push" to drive the Chinese from the Yangtze Delta and crush China's resistance to Japan's ambitions in Asia.

The "big push" took these forms:

1. Acting on rapid-fire orders from the supreme Japanese naval command, the second battle fleet steamed out to stretch the Japanese naval blockade over the entire 2,500-mile China coast from French Indo-China to the Great Wall.

2. Japanese war planes, sweeping over a 50-mile arc to the north, west and south of Shanghai, spread death and terror among thousands of helpless civilians, wholly or partially destroying scores of towns and villages in the most ruthless air raid of the war.

3. Khaki-clad troops landed along the Whangpoo, where cavalry, heavy artillery and tanks were massed at Yangtzepoo, and launched a powerful thrust backed by the big guns of the third battle fleet, at the cracking center of the Chinese line.

Heavy Naval Barrage.

The military offensive was designed to cut through the heavily reinforced Chinese lines, split their communications and compress the central army forces in a giant pincer-movement between Shanghai and Woosung.

After a temporary lull just before dawn, Japanese batteries along the Whangpoo suddenly unleashed a terrific barrage, throwing shells into Chinese lines from the North Station to Kiangwan.

While the Japanese warship Idzumo and two gunboats withdrew down river to pour shells into the Pootung section, covering the rear of the advance, 15,000 Japanese soldiers landed at Yangtpoo and began the drive inland.

The International Settlement, on the fringe of the fighting, rocked as giant Japanese guns started the bombardment to cover the infantry advance, and Chinese guns replied frantically from behind the lines.

Chinese, with 200,000 troops in the Shanghai sector, were reported

D. C. Man Hurt In Chute Jump At Air Races

Wind Sweeps Kim Scribner Off Field; Rudy Kling Wins Greve Race.

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 5.—Kim Scribner, of Washington, 22-year-old parachute jumper, was injured today when a high wind swept him off the municipal airport course and dashed him to earth in a nearby automobile parking lot.

Thousands of spectators attending the National Air Races looked on in horror. The accident marred the opening event of the day's program, a mass parachute-jump.

Scribner was taken to the field hospital. Attendants said his injuries were not critical.

In the $11,000 Louis W. Greve Trophy dash, 150-mile closed-course feature of the day's program, Rudy A. Kling, Lemont, Ill., flier, roared across the finish line in first place.

In second place was S. J. Wittman, of Oshkosh, Wis., lean, bespectacled designer of racing planes, who already had broken two meet records in competition Saturday. G. H. Gotch, of Los Angeles, finished third.

Kling's average speed was 232.272 miles per hour. He won $4,500 in prize money, the remainder of the total being divided among the others who placed.

Earlier in the day Earl Ortman, tow-headed Los Angeles flier, electrified the crowd when he whipped his snub-nosed Keith-Rider racer around the closed course to score the fastest time of the qualifying heats for tomorrow's classic.

Ortman's fastest lap averaged 263.023 miles an hour—a mile an hour short of the world record set last year in the Thompson trophy event by Michael Detroyat, of France.

Lizard Fossil Found.

Bad Pork Poisons 15, Reds Execute 'Terrorist' Cooks

Moscow, Sept. 5 (U.P.).—Two restaurant cooks, charged with using spoiled pork to poison 15 commanders of the Soviet's air raid defense corps, were sentenced to death today as the purge of "Fascist wreckers" gave Leningrad firing squads 24 hours of almost constant work.

Twenty-one persons have been sentenced to death as "enemies of the state" in the Leningrad region since yesterday and 24 others face prison terms, according to reports reaching Moscow.

Two Navy Fliers Killed in Crash Near Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 5 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. Henry C. Clayton and Lieut. Herbert R. Schaeffer were killed in the crash of a U. S. Navy plane at Friendsville, Md., a hilly section near Cumberland.

Sergt. A. M. Spioch, who investigated the crash for State police, said he identified the men from papers in their pockets. He attributed the crash to heavy fog and rain. The plane, he said, burst into flames after the wreck.

At Middletown, Pa., officials at the Army depot said the plane left there for Columbus, Ohio. They said Lieut. Comdr. Clayton's home was in Roslyn, N. Y. They did not know the address of Schaeffer, a Naval Reserve officer, said to be an official of the American Legion national magazine.

6 Die as Mexicans Dispute Land Gifts

Mexico City, Sept. 5 (U.P.).—Six persons were killed and 40 wounded in Tenhuac state today in fighting between peasants for possession of farm lands. Peasants blamed the government agrarian department for the dispute, charging that the department failed to define properly the areas distributed.

Three Governors Back Third Term

New Orleans, Sept. 5 (AP).—Three Governors, here to compete in a sailing race tomorrow, asserted tonight they would support President Roosevelt if he seeks a third term.

They were Richard W. Leche of Louisiana, James V. Allred of Texas and A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky.

Three others, White of Mississippi, Rivers of Georgia and Browning of Tennessee, said they did not care to comment.

Striking Crew Starves 3 Days, Sticks to Ship

Steel Police Threatened to Shoot Men Bringing Food, Union Says.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 5.—An agent of the National Maritime Union charged tonight 37 of the crew of the freighter Oakmar had been aboard without food and water for three days and that Bethlehem Steel Co. police threatened to shoot a crew seeking to get food to the men.

Charles Hansen, agent for the C. I. O. Union, which has called a general strike here in a dispute with the A. F. L. affiliated International Longshoremen's Association, said the men had been without food and water since Thursday.

Officials and police of the Bethlehem Steel Co. declined to comment. The Oakmar, one of several vessels tied up by the strike, is operated by the Calmar Line, a subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel.

"There is a wage dispute between the crew and the company," Hansen said.

"Thursday afternoon officials of the company, protected by 15 company police, came aboard the Oakmar, opened the iceboxes and took all the food off the ship.

"Then they pumped all drinking water out of the tanks. The men have had nothing to eat since.

"When we attempted to take food aboard to them from a launch at 4 p. m. today, company police lined the rails with drawn guns and threatened to kill us.

"The members of the crew say they will stick it out to the bitter end."

Visitors seeking to board the vessel were stopped by company police.

15 Die in Feud Over Partition Of Palestine

15 Seized as Jews Gather at Wailing Wall; Many Are Wounded.

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, Sept. 5.—British authorities arrested 15 extremists at Haifa tonight as the Holy Land counted 15 dead and many seriously wounded in violence between Arabs and Jews over the proposed plan for partition of Palestine.

The arrests came as authorities took stern precautions to prevent an attack against Jews assembling at the ancient Wailing Wall to mark orthodox observance of the Jewish New Year.

Those arrested tonight were Arab and Jewish youths.

Eleven Arabs, including S. G. Mings, nephew of the mayor of Haifa, have been killed and many wounded. Three Jews have been slain and three gravely wounded.

14 Die, Many Hurt In Reich RailCrash

Dusseldorf, Germany, Sept. 5 (AP). Fourteen persons were killed today when a special train carrying Catholic pilgrims to Kevelaer was derailed at Holzheim, near Neuss. Of the many injured, 16 were in a critical condition.

Starving Boy, 12, Lost 6 Days, Conquers Continental Divide

Butte, Mont., Sept. 5.—Joseph Hipp, 12, lost in the mountains six foodless days and nights and who slept in a cave but "wasn't scared," ate ice cream cones and told of his experiences at a hospital today.

Given up for dead after a fruitless search in the high Rockies, the Butte boy last night stumbled into a prospector's cabin at the head of Mill Creek, 20 miles south of Anaconda.

He had wandered miles through the densely timbered area. He had crossed the Continental Divide through a pass which posses searching for him thought would be impossible to travel.

At the cabin of Jack Anderson he tasted his first food since he disappeared from a family fishing trip last Sunday.

"I wasn't scared all the time," he said.

"Only sometimes when I got to thinking I'd never get out of it and that I was going to die—then I cried. I wanted to be home with mother.

"Three nights I slept in a cave. One night I dreamed I was cold—it was terribly cold every night up there. I dreamed I went to the clothes closet at home and started to take clothes off the hooks. When I woke up, I was pulling rocks down on myself.

"Once I heard a train and I tried to run toward it, but I guess it was 20 miles away. Other times I heard somebody—the searchers, I guess—firing guns, but they were awfully far away. I couldn't reach them. Nights I didn't sleep in he cave I spent by whatever big rocks were around.

"One day, toward the end, I saw a woodchuck and thought if I could hit him I'd eat him raw. I stopped to pick up a rock, but was too weak to throw it. I had two matches, but he wind blew them out when I tried to build a fire."

The boy's father, Benjamin Hipp, and a younger brother, Johnny, 10, who were still searching, were notified and brought the lad to Butte today. His mother wept with joy.

Desperado Holds 2 Policemen for 12 Hours On Farm, Then Flees Posse of 500 in Their Car

By the Associated Press.

Cortland, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Two Johnson City, N. Y., policemen, held prisoner at the point of an automatic rifle for 12 hours by a calm-voiced desperado, were released unharmed by their kidnaper near here tonight.

Forced to drive at gunpoint from Johnson City to an abandoned farm near Cincinnatus, the officers were held until nightfall when their captor took their police car and drove away.

As the officers, Patrick Cunningham and Harry Pettit, walked to a nearby farmhouse where they phoned State police at Homer, N. Y., a posse of approximately 500 volunteers and State and local police made an ever-widening search for the desperado, believed to be Clyde Derrick, of Rome, N. Y.

After his release Cunningham said he and Pettit were disarmed and forced into their own automobile by a man they sought to question. Cunningham declared his captor answered the description of Derrick, sought for issuing a worthless check.

Police described Derrick as a "very dangerous man."

Green Assails Lewis' Blow at Roosevelt as U. S. Prepares Labor Tributes

Lewis Supports Reprisals for Court Bill Foes

Rival Leaders to Renew Battle Today; Miss Perkins to Speak.

By Russell Smith

The Nation today will pay its annual Labor Day tribute to the workers of America, more strongly organized than ever in their history but at the same time more sharply cleft by division.

This division was sharply emphasized last night, on the eve of the annual holiday, when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, denounced John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Lewis indorsed a senatorial plea for defeat of those who opposed President Roosevelt's court plan.

For the Federal Government and the country at large, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, were to praise the workers in radio addresses delivered from Washington.

But such sentiments may go largely unheard, it was anticipated, in clamorous renewal on a Nation-wide front of the great factional debate between leaders of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

Green and Lewis to Speak.

In almost every city of importance the opposed organizations today had listed speakers and invited attendance of union men, but the major addresses were to be delivered by Green, at Dallas, and Lewis at Pittsburgh.

At a banquet of Texas labor leaders in Dallas, Green, in a speech preliminary to today's address, called Roosevelt "the greatest friend of labor who ever sat in the White House."

Without naming Lewis, Green said in clear reference to his rival:

"He denounced in autocratic and dictatorial terms the greatest friend of labor who has ever sat in the White House. The enemies the President has made were made because of the devoted way in which he stood for labor. Yet he denounced Franklin D. Roosevelt because he didn't do what he wished him to do.

"I resent it. I resent it emphatically in the name of the laborers of this Nation."

After a brief discussion of local labor problems, Green assailed the C. I. O. bitterly, asserting "only an enemy would seek to divide and conquer where the chief asset of organized labor had always been unity and solidarity."

Lewis, in Pittsburgh, refused to reply to Green and said he is "decidedly in harmony with the sentiment enunciated by Senator Guffey," the Pennsylvania Democrat, who recently called for defeat of foes of the President's court bill.

Labor "has been bludgeoned enough by that same (Supreme) court to lead it to believe there should be some new blood," Lewis added.

Lewis Lauds Wagner Act.

The C. I. O. leader also said the Wagner act is satisfactory without changes, and added that labor "might suggest" to the next Congress the Civil Liberties Committee investigate citizens' committees such as the one at Johnstown.

Concerning his Friday speech, Lewis said "the headlines overplayed the political angles of my talk and perhaps failed to take into consideration the more constructive logic of the address."

Two other big guns of the A. F. L. will fire salvoes at strategic spots, when Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, speaks at Erie, Pa., and John P. Frey, A. F. L. metal trades department head, talks in Baltimore.

For the C. I. O., John Brophy will seek at Houston to offset Green in Dallas, and Sidney Hillman will speak from the same platform with Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, at Lawrence, Mass. Brophy and Hillman are members of the C. I. O. high command.

C. I. O. officials said here yesterday they expected attendance at Pittsburgh's mass meeting to exceed last year's 200,000.

But in addition to these speeches and those of Miss Perkins and Madden, Federal officials and labor, professional and business leaders will virtually blanket the country with speeches. Among the important addresses outside labor and Government ranks will be that of Donald R. Richberg, Washington lawyer, at Duluth, Minn.

Pre-Labor Day statements here yesterday included those of Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Benjamin C. Marsh, of the people's lobby.

"Labor in the coming 12 months can win the respect of the people by ridding its ranks of agitators who seek to tear down and destroy not only American industries, but the American form of government," Mrs. Becker said. She also assailed "sit-down strikes, strong-arm picketing and mob rule," and urged the merits of peaceful arbitration.

"Consumer Basis" Asked.

"Unless organized labor soon helps get socialization of natural resources, natural monopolies and basic industries upon a consumer instead of a supercapitalized basis," said Marsh, it is bound to suffer the reverses which have always and everywhere followed the collapse of that house of economic cards we call our economic system."

He assailed higher prices, and warned war will mean "conscription of labor."

While figures from the Department of Labor, meanwhile, were revealing 1,197,000 workers were on strike during the past year—300 per cent more than in the previous year—statistics of the National Industrial Conference Board were indicating increased earnings and employment in that time.

The twin phenomena of prosperity and strikes appeared, therefore, to be as closely related as ever.

The board said that since July, 1936, "there has been an increase of 16.6 per cent in employment, 17.1 per cent in total man-hours worked, and 34.2 per cent in pay-roll disbursements." It added that "average hourly earnings in July of this year were 15.1 per cent higher than a year ago and average weekly earnings were 15 per cent higher."

New Guy Derrick Lifts 60-Ton Columns On Apex Building With Greatest of Ease

Work speeds ahead on the Apex Building, newest giant on the Constitution avenue skyline. Here we see a column taking form, deftly dropped into place, 11 tons per section, by a new construction derrick, first of its kind ever used here.

Huge Crane Is Operated by Engineer Hidden From Sight.

By Elizabeth Ford.

If you've been down at Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street recently, you most likely have taken time, between traffic lights, to tilt your head back and watch the columns on the new Apex Building being jockeyed into position.

The Greeks, who surprised the world with the Parthenon a few years back, had no word for the big guy derrick that is cuddling these 60-ton columns into place . . . but they would have saved themselves a lot of trouble if they had. This guy derrick, the fastest thing in construction gadgets in the business today, is being used for the first time in Washington and for the second time in the country.

It broke into its stride at Radio City, where it helped to clear the way for the record-breaking speed at which it is working here. From truck to sand pit to column takes 30 minutes for each 11½-ton section . . . but we'll get into that in just a couple of paragraphs from now.

John L. Boardman is superintendent. He came to this job from a two-year one in New York, where he was the man who renovated the Metropolitan Opera House.

All you see as you gape at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue are the steel criss-cross muscles of its gigantic boom, but there's even more to the derrick than that. Installed in the basement is an electric engine, manned to the gunwales with a construction engineer. He takes his signals from a signalman, out on top of the superstructure, whose chest is decorated with a portable telephone. The signalman receives instructions from the foreman. Thus, through telephoned instructions from the former, the engineer operates the guy derrick to the sixteenth of an inch, but never actually sees what is going on above him.

The limestone sections are unloaded at the Anacostia Yards and brought over by truck. Then they are placed in a specially prepared sand pit, so that none of their surfaces will be chipped. After that, a fancy little attachment known as a "box-lewis" is inserted in a hole 12 inches deep which has been drilled into the top of the section. Next, the signalman telephones "alley-oop," the engineer pulls a crank and thar she goes.

It looks easy—and it is . . . but think of the headaches that fellow must have had who invented the guy derrick.

All Moves in Lifting Work Phoned to Room in Basement.

Teamsters to Bolt Labor Day Parade

San Francisco, Sept. 5 (AP).—Union teamsters, pressing their "finish fight" against C. I. O. longshoremen and warehousemen, today led a bolt of many A. F. of L. units from San Francisco's projected Labor Day parade tomorrow.

Teamsters, seeking jurisdiction over the warehousemen's union now affiliated with the C. I. O., had the San Francisco waterfront virtually isolated from inland activity. They planned to extend the tieup to Oakland Wednesday and were threatening to involve every port on the Pacific Coast unless the John L. Lewis forces capitulated.

Warns He Will Oppose Pooling of Husband-Wife Tax Returns.

By the United Press.

The first shot in a Congressional battle which may rival in intensity the struggle over President Roosevelt's Supreme Court bill was fired last night when Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, warned he would "vigorously and doggedly" oppose tax law revisions aimed at "community property" States.

Connally's warning was given in a letter to Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, chairman of a House Ways and Means sub-committee which is considering wholesale renovation of the Nation's tax structure. The President informed Congress early this year the Treasury would submit proposed tax law revisions to the Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees in November.

Connally is a member of the Senate Finance Committee, and informed Vinson he had fought "community property" measures for many years.

"Enlightened Policy."

"When the tax bill reaches the Finance Committee I expect to vigorously and doggedly fight any effort to penalize the community property States because they have adopted the enlightened and liberal policy of the recognition of equal property rights in wives and husbands," Connally wrote.

There are eight so-called "community property" States—Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Washington, Idaho and Nevada.

In the eight States, community property laws are rules of property, Connally pointed out. The wife is entitled to one-half of the joint earnings of her husband during the marriage relation. This income becomes the property of the wife. She is entitled to file a separate income tax return.

Tax experts protest the effect of the law is to reduce the size of the taxable income as it affects surface brackets and thus slices the amount of revenue the Government can get from taxing this income.

Upholds "Rights of Women."

"For the Federal Government to penalize the community property States by seeking to tax the income of husband and wife jointly would amount to a distinct discouragement to States to recognize the equal rights of women," Connally said.

He denied the contention the community property laws constitute a tax loophole or that they were drafted to evade Federal taxes, pointing out that the laws were adopted in Texas in 1840 and were retained by Louisiana in its first legal code in 1808.

Connally notified Vinson he wished to be heard before the committee closes its deliberations on the community property State legislation.

Plea Broadcast For Invocation Of Neutral Act

By the Associated Press.

Six peace organizations carried to the American people yesterday their demand that President Roosevelt immediately apply the neutrality act to the Sino-Japanese conflict.

This action was taken after a high official declared the Administration would not be stampeded into invocation of the law barring shipment of war materials and extension of loans to belligerents.

The peace societies, acting in concert, broadcast through regional, State and branch offices statements urging citizens generally to back them up in the demand, which they laid before President Roosevelt in a joint letter last week.

Organizations issuing the appeal were World Peaceways, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the National Council for Prevention of War, the Emergency Peace Campaign, the Fellowship for Reconciliation and the Committee on Militarism in Education.

900 See Man Saved After Dive Off Ship

The 900 or more passengers on the steamer Potomac got an unadvertised thrill last night when Floyd W. Trice, 30, of 231 F street northeast, dived from the bow of the vessel off Alexandria.

A life boat was lowered and Trice was rescued. When the moonlight cruise ended at Seventh street wharves, Trice was turned over to the Harbor Precinct, where he was charged with being drunk and disorderly.

Wells Draws Fire Of Catholic Priest

Nottingham, England, Sept. 5 (AP).—H. G. Wells' recent suggestion that educators stop perplexing students with "myths of creation" today drew what was interpreted as veiled criticism from the Catholic Church.

Although he did not mention names, Father H. V. Gill, of Dublin, speaking before scientists who heard Wells' address September 2, condemned "certain amateur and shallow popular writers who sneer at myths of creation."

Wells defined Palestine as "no more than part of the highway between Egypt and Mesopotamia" and added "nothing started there."

Nobel Winner Taps Isotopes For 2 New Kinds of Nitrogen

Dr. Urie Explains Process to Chemical Society; Noted Scientist Also Starts Separation of Different Types of Potassium.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Two new kinds of nitrogen, made by a new process of tapping the greatest untouched source of the world's chemical wealth, known as the "isotopes," were announced here today by Dr. Harold C. Urey, Nobel prize winner in chemistry, to the American Chemical Society.

Nitrogen is important in dynamite, dyes, albuminous food, and forms 80 per cent of the air. Ordinary nitrogen is composed of two kinds, heavy and light. The heavy stuff is rare, only .38 of 1 per cent existing in ordinary nitrogen.

Dr. Urey has separated the two in tangible amounts for the first time. He is manufacturing daily at Columbia University about one-third of a pint of the heavy nitrogen gas. This is a thousand times more than any previous rate of "separation."

It gives science for the first time enough to experiment. Whether it would make "delayed dynamite," sometimes exploding a little slower than at present, or be useful in dyes or in making artificial air to breathe is something for future industrialists to investigate.

But at Columbia one immediate practical use has been found. The heavy nitrogen shows how food containing nitrogen distributes not only in the digestive tract, but afterward can be traced through the tissues.

Dr. Urey announced also the start of a successful method to separate for the first time the different kinds of potassium, a metal which is important to life, and particularly to the action of the human heart. There are three kinds of potassium. Scientists call these variations "isotopes." The term means atoms of the same chemical, but with different weights.

Parties of U. S. Both Wrecked, Butler Asserts

Columbia President Urges 'Liberal' and 'Radical' Vote Alignment.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Asserting the historic American political parties "are completely wrecked," Nicholas Murray Butler suggested yesterday the realignment of American voters into two new parties according to whether they want to solve economic and labor problems by "liberal," or "radical" methods.

The president of Columbia University made the recommendations in his annual speech at the Parrish Art Museum.

"The one party, which might be called Constitutional Liberal, would aim to deal with economic questions and to solve economic problems as they arise in a spirit of liberal, forward-facing and constructive statesmanship, but within the limits of the principles underlying the Constitution of the United States and its classic Bill of Rights," he said.

Parties Split by Industry.

"The opposition party, which would probably wish to be called Progressive, should properly be designated as reactionary radical, since it would, on the other hand, proceed to deal with the economic questions of the time without any restriction whatever arising from top to bottom.

"In a democracy there is no place for a Labor party any more than for a bankers' party or a farmers' party or a school teachers' party or a party bearing the name and trying to serve the interests of any other special economic or social group."

Assails Closed Shop.

Reviewing recent labor troubles and their treatment, Dr. Butler said:

"No wage worker should be compelled to join in collective bargaining if he does not wish to do so, nor should he be allowed to suffer at the hands of either of his fellow workers or of his employers because he prefers to hold himself aloof from any compulsory organization.

"That is why the so-called closed shop is not only undesirable but highly inconsistent with any doctrine of personal or economic liberty.

"Advocates of the closed shop, while among the most violent denunciators of fascism, are alert and eager to practice fascism at the very first opportunity to do so.

Dozen States Improve Child Labor Statutes

4 Ratify Federal Amendment as Congress Rows Over Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

A dozen States revised and improved their child labor laws in the past year while Congress wrangled over the recurring problem of a Federal prohibition against child labor.

The long-pending amendment to the Constitution was ratified by four more States during the year, bringing the total ratifying to 28. New Mexico, Kansas, Nevada and Kentucky were the latest to join the list.

Out of 37 child labor bills introduced at the last session of Congress, a measure for Federal regulation of such labor was finally incorporated in the Administration's wage and hour. But Congress adjourned without taking action.

A review of child labor legislation in the States includes the following highlights:

North Carolina—Established a 16-year age minimum for factory employment and 14 years for non-factory employment; a 14-year minimum for children in street trades; a 40-hour week maximum for minors under 16; a 48-hour week for minors 16 to 17, and a prohibition against employment of minors under 18 in hazardous occupations.

16-Year Minimum.

South Carolina—Established a 16-year minimum for minors in factory employment to minors in all gainful occupations, and set a 9-hour day and 50-hour week as the maximum for minors 16 to 17.

Pennsylvania—Raised compulsory school attendance age from 16 to 17 for the schol year 1938-39, and increased it to 18 years for all school term after 1939.

Oklahoma—Reduced the age at which children must enter school from 8 to 7.

New Hampshire—Reduced the work week for women and minors under 18 in manual and mechanical jobs to 10 hours a day and 48 hours a week.

Ohio—Extended the eight-hour day, 48-hour week for boys under 16 and girls under 18 to boys under 18 and girls under 21.

Prestige Is Lost By Roosevelt, Ryan Asserts

Farm Bill Passage May Regain Ground, Says Catholic Prelate.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 5.—A Catholic prelate, one of President Roosevelt's stanchest supporters, said tonight the Chief Executive's prestige in Congress and the country was one of the Nation's "important questions."

The opinion was offered by the Right Rev. Mgr. John A. Ryan, professor of ethics and moral theology at the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C. Mgr. Ryan is here to deliver the Labor Day sermon at St. Mary's Cathedral tomorrow.

"The important questions confronting America today are political with, of course, an economic angle to them," the prelate commented in an interview.

"The most important of these is what extent members of the Congress previously considered liberal, who have supported the President's progressive measures, will continue to support him in the future. The sidetracking of the President's wages and hours bill witnessed the desertion of the President by many of those on whom he had counted in the past.

"Failure of the Congress to take action on the farm bill was another serious blow."

Mgr. Ryan declared "there is no gainsaying the fact that President Roosevelt has lost ground in the middle-class people and among the farmers. Whether he will regain that ground with the passage of the farm bill by the next Congress, and by other progressive measures, it is difficult to say."

Fading Blue Ranks Honor Their Dead

Madison, Wis., Sept. 5 (AP).—Hardy survivors from the decimated ranks of the "Boys in Blue" paid tribute today to the thousands for whom "Taps" has been blown.

Fewer than 200 veterans of the Civil War—a figurative handful—answered the roll cal for the seventy-first encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Their first thought was for comrades who have gone before, and the opening of the five-day meeting was given entirely to religious and memorial services.

Submarine 'Quarantine' Will Be Asked at 12-Power Parley; Italy Invited

'International Navy' to Sink Pirates Urged

Conference Is Moved From Geneva for Benefit of Hitler and Il Duce.

By the United Press.

Paris (Monday), Sept. 6.—Twelve European nations will be asked this week to order their submarines out of the Mediterranean while an "international navy" hunts down the mysterious submarines which have been torpedoing and sinking merchant ships, it was revealed today.

The ambitious plan for a submarine "quarantine," drafted by France and Great Britain, was disclosed after simultaneous announcement in Paris and London that the 12 powers—including Italy, Germany and Russia—have been invited formally to confer on a means of ending the pirate attacks.

The meeting will be held, probably Friday, at Lausanne, Montreux or Ouchy, in Switzerland.

Moved From Geneva.

Originally scheduled for Geneva, where the League of Nations Council will sit Friday to take up Loyalist Spain's charges of Italian "aggression," the conference will be moved in order to obtain the cooperation of Italy and Germany, who consistently have boycotted all consultations in the League capital.

The plan to be offered the 12 powers was said to provide:

1. Confinement of all neutral submarines to their home ports, or at least to territorial waters.
2. Public registration of all submarines in use by the Spanish loyalists and insurgents.
3. Pledges by the 12 powers they will not permit use of their submarines "by any other power" for use in attacks on ships at sea.
4. Agreement that the pooled navies of the 12 nations shall "sink on sight" any submarine molesting a merchant ship or warship.

Germany, Italy Opposed.

There was scant likelihood such an ambitious proposal would be accepted because Germany and Italy will cite the refusal of France and Britain to take similar action after the reported torpedo attack on the German cruiser Leipzig off Spain three months ago.

The conference, proposed by France and agreed to by Great Britain after a series of mysterious attacks on neutral vessels along the Mediterranean trade routes, originally was envisaged as including only nations bordering on the Mediterranean.

Until tonight it had appeared doubtful whether an invitation would be extended to Italy, because of the suspicion—and open accusation in France and Russia—that Italian submarines were responsible for the piracy.

Germany in Patrol.

Germany was invited, the foreign office explained, because of her participation until June 1 in the now defunct system of international nonintervention patrol off the Spanish coasts.

The other nations invited to the conference, in addition to France and Britain, were Russia, Rumania, Albania, Greece, Bulgaria, Turkey, Egypt and Yugoslavia.

Russia, already reported to be preparing to move her Black Sea fleet into the Mediterranean, demanded a role in the "war on piracy" because she has been one of the major victims of the mysterious attacks on oil and coal ships. During the last week two of her ships have been sunk.

With the grouping of French and Russian representatives on the one hand and Italian and German on the other, the possibility of an explosion of hatreds was great.

Italy, blaming the Mediterranean terrorism on Spanish loyalists and their Russian allies, said the "Reds" were attempting to crystallize hatred of Premier Mussolini to force open British intervention in the civil war on the side of the loyalists.

Church of God Washes Sinners in Washington Channel: 'Sing, Brother!'

Singing Pastor Immerses 13 As Spectators Shiver in Rain

'Beautiful,' Exclaim Women as New Members of Church of God in Christ Emerge From Washington Channel.

Rain alone marred the colored baptismal ceremonies in the Washington Channel yesterday afternoon. Robes of the 13 to be baptized were white, and dramatically draped. The Rev. Charles Beck, pastor of the Church of God in Christ—now in revival session at Twenty-fifth and I streets northwest—was in excellent form. There were good voices in the audience.

But cold showers can dampen enthusiasm at a baptizing as quickly as they can spoil a wheat harvest. "Sing, Brother, Sing," fell on wet ears, and "Come to the Water" contained but scattered appeal. "Amens" were few and lacking in fervor. The new church members reached the banks shivering, rather than shouting.

While the leaderless singers sang "The Things I Used to Do, I Don't Do No More" an assistant pastor passed a Panama hat. "It takes the three G's to insure salvation—grit, grace and greenbacks. Help the cause along," was the exhortation; but it did not help much, the collection was small.

The baptizing more than measured up to expectations. "Beautiful!" exclaimed the women when Pastor Beck immersed the first "sinner." It was an exclamation heard many times.

Pastor Beck and his assistant wore black robes. With long poles they plumbed the depth of the channel and blocked out the baptismal grounds. The poles then were stuck into the channel in goal-post fashion, and the baptizing began.

In between baptizings the young pastor led the singing. "In the valley," he would sing, and the audience would follow with, "I couldn't hear nobody pray." Or perhaps his song would be, "Leaning" and the audience's refrain would be "Leaning on Jesus."

The revival will continue nightly in the church's tent for "two or three weeks yet," and then indefinitely inside the church for two or three nights a week.

1,197,644 on Strike In First Half of '37

By the United Press.

Labor's struggle to unionize American workers threw 1,197,644 on strike the first six months of 1937, an increase of 300 per cent over the same period last year, Department of Labor statistics showed last night.

The figures disclosed 372,285 strikers in the first half of 1936 and 788,648 strikers in the entire year. From January 1 to July 1 of this year strikers lost 17,984,596 mandays of work as compared with 13,901,956 during the same period last year.

Woman Ends Life With Head in Oven

Leaving a note for her husband which read: "Don't feel bad about this, I'll be happy," Mrs. Viola Gordon, 28, of 1527 D street northeast, killed herself yesterday by gas.

The note was addressed to her husband, John, a railroad worker, who was not home when his wife put her head into the kitchen oven and turned on the gas.

Felled by a Priest, Church Thief Hides Loot in Police Auto

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—This is a story about a speedy priest with a mean uppercut and the first thief in New York's history who ever hid his loot in a police car.

A young man called at the rectory of St. Angelo Merici Church last night, and Father Cornelius Hance emerged from supper just in time to find the visitor running down from the upstairs church office and out the door.

Father Hance pursued and after a block's chase felled the young man with a right to the jaw just as two policemen arrived in a cruising car.

The young man admitted he'd stolen $28 from the church office, but a careful search failed to disclose a penny. Finally the young man said:

"I hid it under the seat of the police car."

And there it was.

World Warned Two Conflicts 'Peril Europe'

Blum and Delbos Fear Far East and Spanish Trouble Will Spread.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 5.—Two French government spokesmen warned the world today that the crises in the Far East and in the Mediterranean are increasing the dangers of war in Europe.

Former Premier Leon Blum inferentially laid some of the blame for new perils to Europe's peace at the door of Italy in an address to a Socialist rally at Velizy.

Referring to the formal Italian acknowledgement that Italians had participated in the drive of insurgent Generalissimo Franco against government-held Santander, Blum declared:

"The capture of Santander was feted like an Italian victory. The intervention of Italy has taken on a public character. Italy not only confesses it but proclaims it."

Yvon Delbos, foreign minister in the cabinet of Premier Camille Chautemps, told the thirty-third Interparliamentary Congress at Versailles:

"It is time for the conscience of the people of the world and their most elementary instincts of preservation to be awakened to face the dangers of war."

The foreign minister declared:

"There must be vigorous action by all peoples who understand that to prevent war they must show the strength of their unity."

Reviewing the Sino-Japanese conflict, the former premier said the "war" was endangering foreign interests in Southern China while in North China it was "developing in a direction which may become particularly delicate for communications between Soviet Russia and her extreme eastern province."

250,000 Open Vast Offensive Against Franco

300 Russian Planes and Fleets of Tanks to Attack Rebels.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Sept. 5.—Gen. Sebastian Pozas, loyalist commander in chief of the Aragon front, announced tonight that the capture of strategic Belchite with a toll of 5,000 rebel casualties, was "only the beginning" of a gigantic government offensive on all fronts.

The Belchite victory, biting deep into the core of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's teruel salient that threatened for a time to put Madrid at the mercy of a starvation siege, was described by Pozas as the "first phase" of the government's plans.

While 250,000 troops, aided by 300 Russian "Chatos" planes and fleets of cannon-armed tanks, moved forward on seven scattered battlefronts, an air of tense expectancy pervaded the capital.

Reports that a virtual military dictatorship would be established to bulwark the "big push" were strengthened by a decree—signed by Premier Juan Negrin, at Valencia—forbidding the use of taxis, auto buses or private automobiles in any part of loyalist Spain.

Every motor vehicle will be commandered for military purposes.

At the same time orders were given for stern "adjustments" of food allotments and for a crusade against the rebels "fifth column"—in other words, insurgent and Fascist sympathizers within loyalist territory. Scores of Franco adherents, many accused of espionage, have been executed recently, reliable reports said.

Hitler, Il Duce Plan Anti-Red, Austrian Pacts

Military 'Understanding' Regarding Russia and Spain Sought.

By the United Press.

London, Sept. 5.—Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler, harried by realization the war in Spain may be fought to a standstill despite their aid in insurgents, will formulate a bold front against communism at their meeting in Berlin, it was understood reliably tonight.

At the same time they will attempt to solve permanently the thorny question of Austria, for months a threat to the smooth functioning of the Rome-Berlin axis, diplomats said.

Austria is looked upon by Hitler as within the zone of Nazi influence, while Mussolini—despite his consent to the return of Nazi activities in Austria—is fearful of German troops in Brenner Pass.

During the past six months, since the Rome visit of Hitler's chief lieutenant, Col. Gen. Hermann W. Goering, the world has been told Austria has been "neutralized." Diplomats, however, profess to see smoldering suspicion between the two dictators.

Observers said there was little possibility of a forthright military alliance growing out of Mussolini's visit to Berlin, but that at least a military "understanding" probably would be reached regarding Russia.

Whatever decisions the dictators make on their roles in Spain will be aimed indirectly at the Soviets, for both look upon the possibility of a Communist regime in Spain as a disaster.

Mussolini has boastfully announced Italy never will tolerate a Bolshevist state on the shores of the Mediterranean. Hitler has committed himself to an insurgent victory for the cause of dictatorship.

Should France, before the meeting of the dictators, carry out her veiled threat to open her Pyrenees frontier and permit the flow of men, munitions and supplies to the Spanish loyalists, Hitler and Mussolini probably would jump at the excuse to intervene on a large scale.

Pastors Challenge Nazidom as Party Prepares to Meet

Berlin, Sept. 5 (AP).—Protestant pastors of Prussia hurled a challenge to Nazidom today, reading from their pulpits exhortations to betrines in state establishments."

A. F. L. Craft Dispute May Block U. S. Lifts

Unless differences between three craft unions of the American Federation of Labor are ironed out at a special meeting Tuesday, installation of elevators in the Government Printing Office warehouse will be indefinitely postponed.

A walkout on Friday of 25 structural steel workers will prevent installation of the elevators on September 15, as planned, unless a settlement is reached. The controversy arose between the structural iron workers, elevator constructors and millwrights, after officials of the A. F. of L. recently decreed that the millwrights should install the elevators.

Pioneer Climber Returns for Rest

Newark, N. J., Sept. 5 (AP).—Bradford Washburne, back from scaling Alaska's Mount Lucania, highest unclimbed mountain peak in North America, left Newark by airplane tonight for a visit with his family at Cambridge, Mass.

The sun-tanned, youthful looking veteran of 11 mountain climbing seasons, described the ascent of Lucania as "one of the most thrilling experiences of my life." With him on the climb was Robert Bates, instructor of English at the University of Pennsylvania.

President's Yacht Tossed by Storm

Aboard Yacht Indian, Spet. 5 (AP). The Presidential vacation yacht Potomac tossed lightly in Great Salt Pond off Block Island tonight as the storm that struck the coast last night continued.

Although the rain had died down somewhat, the northeast blow had picked up to about 30 miles per hour. It was cold and damp and electric heaters were started on the Potomac.

Secretary James Roosevelt said the President would leave on the Potomac tomorrow for the trip back to Poughkeepsie although no improvement in weather was in sight.

Rosh Hashanah Greeting Sent to Jews by Hull

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday issued the following message on the celebration of Rosh Hashanah today:

"I am happy to join with others in extending to our fellow citizens of the Jewish faith cordial greetings on the occasion of the Jewish New Year and to express the wish that the period then beginning will be productive of continued advancement and increased prosperity."

Extortionist Sentenced To Kiss His Mother

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 4 (AP).—Judge A. J. Veneman today sentenced a 10-year-old boy, who sent a note to the Morris Plan Bank here demanding $5,000, to the following "punishment":

"Kiss your mother, tell her you're sorry, and promise never to do such a thing again."

New Drug Helps Stop That Urge to Leap Out Window

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 5 (AP).—Persons who feel the itch to jump from a high window may be able to save their families all the resulting trouble, a group of Mayo Clinic physicians indicated today.

In some cases suicidal urges may be squelched by using a drug called "benzedrine," which has been used with considerable success in the treatment of neurotic conditions, severe exhaustion, some cases of chronic alcoholism, and severe mental depressions that sometimes lead to self-destruction.

Farmer Slashes Wife To Death, Kills Self

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 5 (AP).—T. A. Gibson, 66, died early today of a self-inflicted shotgun wound, Sheriff Luke Gaule said, after he had killed his wife by cutting her throat with a pocketknife at their farm home near here. John Gibson, a son, told the sheriff his father on several occasions had threatened to kill himself because of blindness, with which he became afflicted seven months ago.

One of 82 Fishermen Saved in China Storm

Manila, Sept. 5 (AP).—The German ship Duisburg arrived today with the lone survivor of a Chinese fishing party of 82 which met disaster in last week's China Sea typhoon. The survivor was picked up at sea after clinging to a piece of wreckage for 15 hours. He said the typhoon created mountainous waves which wrecked the 14 junks in his party.

National Parks to Join Constitution Ceremony

The 150th anniversary of the Constitution will be celebrated June 21, 1938, by the National Park Service, it was announced yesterday by Director Orno B. Cammerer. June 21 is the date New Hampshire, the ninth State, ratified the Constitution.

All national parks are directed to plan fitting ceremonies for the event.

Officials Vision 10-Year Test on Farm Tenancy

Long Term Held Necessary to Determine Value of Program.

By the Associated Press.

Officials launching the Government's farm tenancy program said yesterday it may take ten years to determine the value of this new social experiment.

The newly created Farm Security Administration, which will supervise loans to enable tenants to become farm owners, indicated the $10,000,000 provided by Congress for this year should permit loans to about 2,500 tenants.

Next year the tenancy act authorizes $25,000,000 for these loans, and $50,000,000 each year, for eight years thereafter.

It was said this amount should care for about 100,000 tenants in the ten-year period. This would make only a small dent in the total number of tenants. The National Tenancy Commission, appointed by President Roosevelt to outline the reforms, found there were 2,800,000 tenants on farms in this country and that 40,000 additional farmers were slipping from ownership into the tenancy group each year.

Milo Perkins, aide to Secretary Wallace,, told Congress it would take a "staggering" sum to help all tenants, and advocated the modest beginning on the long-time job.

He said the 2,500 tenants aided the first year would be in 500 selected counties throughout the country. Congress ordered that the tenancy funds be distributed among the States on a basis of farm population and prevelancy of tenancy.

First year operations will merely "establish a pattern and make a beginning," Perkins asserted.

The largest shares of the money are tentatively scheduled to go to the Cotton Belt States and a few Corn Belt States.

Course on War Causes To Be Given at Hobart

Geneva, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—A course on war will be initiated at Hobart College this year as a part of a new program which fixes a four-year study of citizenship as a prerequisite for a degree.

Believed by college officials to be one of the first of its kind, the course will survey underlying causes of armed strife—cultural factors, economic conditions, struggle for markets and nationalistic policies.

Loan Increase, Business Gains Are Reported

Discount Rates Lowered; Agricultural Expansion Noted in Report.

By the United Press.

The Federal Reserve Board tonight reported a sharp upswing in business was reflected by the fact that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by banks in the first half of 1937 amounted to $620,000,000, highest since the summer of 1932.

"The growth in the demand for bank credit on the part of commercial, industrial and agricultural borrowers, which began in most of the larger cities in the first quarter of 1936 and continued through the remainder of that year," said the Reserve Board's monthly bulletin, "became more general in the first half of 1937, when there was a large demand for loans at country banks as well as at city banks."

An indication of agricultural expansion was seen in the fact that the rate of increase in commercial loans this year compared with 1936 was about twice as large at country banks, whereas at New York City banks it was about the same and considerably less at Reserve city banks.

During the last few weeks the Reserve Board has authorized reduction in the discount rates from 2 to 1½ per cent at 10 of the 12 Reserve banks. It approved reduction of the New York rate from 1½ to 1 per cent. Only the Cleveland Reserve bank's discount rate was left untouched, but it already was down to 1½ per cent.

U. S. Efforts for Peace Told by Sen. Barkley

Versailles, France, Sept. 5 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley, majority leader of the United States Senate, today outlined before the thirty-third Interparliamentary Congress the efforts made by the United States for peace.

Senator Barkley said, "we have avoided contracting alliances or making engagements of a political nature, knowing we can better support universal peace by safeguarding our political independence."

Violence Marks Argentine Voting

Buenos Aires, Sept. 5 (AP).—Charges of widespread violence today marked Argentina's election of a successor to President Augustin Justo which Dr. Roberto M. Oritz, candidate of Justo's party, was believed to have won.

Liberal Leader Marcelo T. De Alvear, chief opposition candidate who was president from 1922 to 1928, asserted that the voting in the interior and in Buenos Aires Province had been characterized by violence in behalf of Oritz.

English Town Requests City Manager Plan Data

Special Dispatch to The Post

Staunton, Va., Sept. 5.—J. Henry Gough, town clerk of Ripon, England, has written City Manager W. L. Hall for information concerning the city manager plan, which was originated in Staunton. Gough asks for information dealing with the subject, and also photographs of the city hall, city manager and mayor. Since the city manager plan was originated in Staunton 20 years ago, 500 towns and cities in the United States have adopted it.

Newspaperman Meets 'Darling' Black Panther

Film Scribe Learns About Animals, but Not Much, From Trainer Olga.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 5.—The movies turned a panther loose in the jungle today, put us in a cage so we wouldn't get a leg bitten off, and proved all over again that manufacturing thrills is even more dangerous than it looks on the screen.

The set was on Universial's back lot. The picture in the making was a 12-installment serial, featuring 16-year-old Frankie Thomas, Miss Frances Robinson, New York socialite, in her first movie role, and the meanest looking assortment of beasts you ever saw.

The specially built jungle, consisting of palm trees, rocks, hills, and a lot of bushes and grape vines, was surrounded entirely by heavy netting so that none of the animal stars could invade the rest of the studio.

"Come on in," said Henry Macrae, the producer, holding our arm so that our trembling legs wouldn't get tangled in the creepers. He introduced us to Frankie and Frances and the most important personage on the set, Olga Celeste, the panther trainer.

Olga Gives Advice.

Her black panther, one of two in the whole United States, was caged while this went on. Olga had on puttees, heavy riding pants, gloves, and a man's cap.

She turned to address the technicians and property men.

"If the panther gets out of control," she said, "and comes for you, stand stock still. If you're afraid of animals, you'd better get outside."

Olga looked at us. We looked at the trained nurse, who waited expectantly on the other side of the netting.

Everybody on the set, but us, was used to animals. They all were insured. We weren't. Neither did Olga know how we got along with black panthers. She said we'd have to get inside a telephone booth sized cage, in which was Cameraman Jerry Ash. (He was the only person there who had a cage—and that was because he was surrounded by so much gear that he had no chance to fight panthers.)

We squeezed inside the cage with Jerry, who trained his lens on the rocky ledge over which the panther, named Ecky, was supposed to leap. Olga's assistant opened the cage, Ecky sprang out, and Olga cried:

"Oh, that's a darling, Ecky, now jump up those rock!"

Darling Snarls!

Ecky turned around and snarled at her. Yeah, darling! Jerry turned off the camera and Olga insisted that all the folks get back from the three-foot barrier of chicken netting, which separated them from Ecky darling's fangs. She said they stared so, they made Ecky nervous.

Producer Macrae lead the rest of the help to the rear, and out popped Ecky again. He sniffed around our cage, looked hungrily at our left foot (which we tried to make as inconspicuous as possible) and then Olga snapped her whip. Ecky got the idea and jumped over the rocks in hot pursuit of the villian—who wasn't within miles of the place. (He'll do his jungle running later, when Ecky's through.) "You are a sweetheart," Olga told Ecky, when he'd performed to everybody's satisfaction. He went back into his cage, we walked out of ours, and Olga explained the business of training animals for the movies. While she talked, trucks backed to the side door of the jungle with a load of chipanzees, tigers, and a lion, named Jackie, for subsequent shots.

Be Kind to Animals.

"You've got to treat animals kindly in the movies," Olga said. "You can't get angry, or they do, too, and that ruins the show. You can't hurt them, because they are too valuable. Ecky, for instance, cost $15,000 and that's no mere movie price. You can't go ruining property like that."

One of the troubles with Ecky today was a slight limp. Everybody hoped that in the general excitement, the audiences wouldn't notice. It seemed that that yesterday Ecky was supposed to have been shot in the foot. The villian did it with a blank cartridge, whereupon young Thomas, Ecky's pal, bandaged his paw. (Olga did the actual bandaging wrapping the cloth snugly.)

The unusual feel of it made Ecky limp. Olga took off the bandage by sundown and Ecky went to sleep, when he woke up this morning he still was limping!

Olga said she hoped he'd forget about his bandage by tomorrow.

Little

"Under Two Flags," Twentieth Century-Fox's most recent celluloid transcription of the enduring novel by Ouida—the story has been filmed at least twice before—is revived this week as chief feature of the screen bill at the Little Theater, with Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert in the pivotal roles of Tony Brett and Cigarette, respectively.

In this tempestuous melodrama of the French Foreign Legion in Africa, there are combined the warming qualities of romance and the thrills of vivid armed conflict, with battle scenes on the Sahara that are the last word in spectacular effect. The romantic element of the story hinge upon the jealousy felt by Maj. Doyle when his inamorata, Cigarette, the "daughter of the regiment," seems to evince some interest in the handsome and fearless Brett, who, in turn, surrenders to the charm of one of his own social caste in the person of Lady Venetia Cunningham, a visitor at the post.

The warring aspects of the drama, of course are precipitated by an Arab revolt and by Maj. Doyle's indefatigable effort to assign Brett to some hazardous task from which he will never return. But he always does. The play's most tragic note is sounded in the heroic death of Cigarette. All these divergent ramifications of the pictured events have been filmed with extravagant regard for the requirements of a "big" picture. "Under Two Flags" is truly impressive from every viewpoint of material proportions and far-flung panoramas.

Ronald Colman is an admirable Brett, mixing flashes of effective comedy with the more serious demands of the role, and Claudette Colbert, a native of France to begin with, finds the character of the vivacious young desert canteeen proprietress wholly within the generous span of her talents. Victor McLaglen is a perfect selection for the role of Maj. Doyle, and Rosalind Russell is a beautiful, if somewhat chill, Lady Cunningham. Scores of familiar players appear in supporting roles, foremost among them being Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin, John Carradine, Lumsden Hare Onslow Stevens, Fritz Leiber, William Ricciardi Frank Reicher and Francis McDonald.

Short subjects and newsreel augment the major feature.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Belasco Will Reopen Saturday of This Week Under Same Picture Policy Followed Last Season

Samuel Cummins, of Jewel Productions, Inc., Continues as Lessee of Lafayette Square House; Civic Theater Try-Outs; Some Classy Bookings; Recordings; Notes of the Theater Here and Elsewhere.

PUTTING to rest—at least for the time being—the insistently recurrent rumors that the Lafayette Square house would be devoted this season to the living drama, a combination of motion pictures and vaudeville, rehabilitated burlesque and whatnot, the Belasco Theater will reopen on Saturday of this week under last season's closing policy of imported and unusual films.

BELL.

This announcement comes to the drama desk from Samuel Cummins, president of Jewel Productions, Inc., 410 E. Thirty-second street, New York, lessee of the Belasco during the final months of last season. Mr. Cummins already is well known to Washington theatergoers as a former operator of the Little, Strand and other theaters in the Capital, prior to his incumbency of the Belasco.

Saturday's initial bill, according to Mr. Cummins' letter, will be a repeat engagement of "Sins of Love," one of his most eminent successes at the boxoffice last year. This film, dedicated to the interests of social hygiene, is of such a nature as to compel its presentation to segregated audiences—certain performances being exclusively for women, others for men only.

On Saturday night, however, there will be a one-evening presentation of "Our Daily Bread," continuous showings from 6 to 12 p. m., under the auspices of the District Co-operative League.

"Our Daily Bread" is a King Vidor production, originally released in 1934, at which time it elicited the hearty endorsement of many distinguished people who viewed it, among them Senator Royal S. Copeland, now a candidate for the New York mayoralty. Concerning it, Senator Copeland had this to say: "I wish every American might see this picture. We are living in a time when there is so much unemployment, so much skepticism regarding the future and so much perfectly natural apprehension as to the outcome of the Nation, that we need to have our hearts refreshed and our physical powers strengthened by seeing what can be done in a time of emergency . . . It should be seen by every citizen."

Following the engagement of "Sins of Love," Mr. Cummins makes known that the next attraction at the Belasco will be a work newly imported to this country under the title of "Libertine." This was made under the direction of Machaty, the talented European, whose production of "Ecstasy," last season's Belasco perennial, occasioned his transplantation to Hollywood, where not too much has been heard of him since.

Tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock, the Washington Civic Theater will hold its first try-outs of the new season at the Wardman Park Theater. All members of this acting group are eligible to attend and any resident of Washington or vicinity will be welcomed. Anyone desiring to do so may purchase a subscription which automatically makes him a member of the organization. While the try-outs are primarily for those whose principal interest is acting, everyone interested in the theater is urged to attend and meet F. Cowles Strickland, the Civic Theater's new director. Production crews will be lined up at this time and it is the aim of the Civic management to give all who enjoy working in the theater a chance to participate in its activities. This, I hope, will serve as a reply to the numerous letters that have come to this column inquiring as to this very thing.

Ronald Colman, Dick Powell, Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, Madeleine Carroll, Francis Lederer, Mischa Auer, Gary Cooper and George Raft comprise a list of names that sounds a bit like a cross-section of the entertainment world's favorites. Believe it or not, all of these nice people are to be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater during the current month, according to an announcement made over the week-end by John J. Payette, the Warner Brothers' general zone manager in the Washington territory.

Colman, of course, already is at the Earle in the popular-price showing of Columbia's "Lost Horizon," although by the very testimony of this picture Columbia has not so much lost its horizon as acquired a new and broader one.

Dick Powell and Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians—including Tom Waring, the Lane Sisters, "Poly" McClintock, the frog-voiced percussionist, and all the rest of the boys and girls so well known and liked in the National Capital—arrive on the screen Friday in "Varsity Show," a new campus musical.

The Francis Lederer-Madeleine Carroll-Mischa Auer trio will be seen the following week in Columbia's new comedy, "It's All Yours."

Gary Cooper and George Raft will round out the month as costars of Paramount's "Souls at Sea," an adventurous romance of the so-called bounding main. This film is being "road-showed" at advanced prices in many cities, but will be presented here at the Earle's customary scale.

A very opulent line-up, if you ask me—and, as usual, even if you don't.

Dots and Dashes.

As we have suspected for some time, this Katharine Cornell must be a pretty fair actress . . . Sir Benjamin Fuller has invited her to dedicate the new theater he plans to build in Sydney, Australia, if she makes her world tour . . . To copper that bet, as we say in the better circles, J. C. Williamson, Ltd., the opposition, also considering the erection of a new playhouse in Sydney, has expressed the wish that if the new theater is built she will consent to open it . . . Sidney B. Lust, the Capital's enterprising independent, will act as host to 700 Post carrier boys at his Cameo Theater, Mount Rainier, on Wednesday at 1 p. m., to see the Louis-Farr fight films . . . Plenty of left jabs will be thrown around these diggings that night! . . . In co-operation with Recording Specialist Jim Moran and Station WRC, Loew's Palace will make free recordings of patrons attending the showings of "Stella Dallas," starting Friday. These recordings will be broadcast each morning on WRC's "Timekeeper" hour . . . Moran will install a complete recording laboratory in the lobby of the Palace and can the voices of the cash customers, a job at which he is especially skillful . . . We ought to know, because Jim boxed a brief speech of ours once . . . Do we really sound like that? . . . At 11 o'clock this morning, WRC will put a special transcription of "Stella Dallas" on the air, with Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley, Alan Hale, Barbara O'Neill and others in the cast . . . This recording was made at the Goldwyn West Coast studios and I am afraid will be very good, indeed . . . Can tell you more about it after Tuesday afternoon's preview of the picture . . . I do not agree with my old friend Fifi D'Orsay that since she has become a full-fledged American citizen she has completely changed her style . . . She has merely added a lot to the style she already had, as those who see her at Loew's Capitol will attest . . . Quite a firecracker, this Fifi . . . And ample Mr. Johnny Perkins, as jovial and competent a comedian and master of ceremonies as the theater can boast, happily will be held for a third week at the same theater . . . Johnny will have some working mates with whom he can "go to town," come Friday . . . Harris and Yvonne Ashburn, the young dancers currently on the Earle stage, are glad the Sino-Japanese rumpus didn't wait until October to break out . . . They were booked to appear in the bombed Cathay Hotel, where they played for 20 weeks last year . . . Even war clouds, it seems, sometimes have a silver lining.

Tracy Angles for Salmon on Outing

Spencer Tracy has chartered a boat for a two-week salmon fishing cruise in Canadian Pacific waters. He must report back at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at the end of two weeks to start in "Mannequin."

Headlines the Earle Stage Bill

That eminent violinist, Paul Tisen, pictured above, supplies a particularly appropriate auxiliary of the bill featuring "The Lost Horizon," at the Earle Theater this week, with his Astor Hotel Orchestra. This instrumental ensemble does not go in for "swing" numbers and trick arrangements, but confines itself to a program of real music highly fitting for the occasion of a fine film's popular-price inaugural.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 5.—Out of the past: If you are a veteran movie fan, with memories dating back to the "positive" era when vamps were vamps and heroes were heroes, there is one star name that you can never forget—Theda Bara. She was the first and most famous of screen vampires. Remember her as the heavily-lided charmer of "A Fool There Was?" You would laugh at the over-acting that distinguished that opus, if you saw it today, but you thought it was a great picture then.

SIMONE SIMON.

Today, the one-time Theda Bara is Mrs. Charles Brabin, wife of one of Hollywood's more successful directors. Wealthy, socially prominent, she has everything that the normal person could ask for—but she has never been reconciled to the loss of her fame. Time after time, she has struggled for a come-back. Perhaps she might have been successful if she had been willing to play small roles, but her pride was always too great to tolerate such a concession.

Too much publicity drove her from the screen. Publicity men labored to surround her with a veil of mystery to fit her screen roles. They said that she was born in Egypt "in the shadow of the Sphinx," that she bathed daily in milk, that she had second sight, that she possessed supernatural power over men. Whenever she traveled, her compartment was hung with velvet drapes and filled with exotic incense. The public seemed to like the show for a time, but with the realism that followed the World War, vamps became passe and the Theda Bara publicity became ridiculous rather than exciting.

In a way, I am glad that Theda Bara is doomed to remain Mrs. Charles Brabin. More than any other star, she typifies one of the screen's most glamorous eras.

Lunching with Carole Lombard in the Brown Derby when a sudden commotion near the entrance announced the arrival of one of Hollywood's best-known—and least-liked—stars. Several autograph hunters requested her signature, but she swept by them with regal disdain; two or three press photographers trained their cameras on her, but she turned her back and walked to the other side of the cafe. Carole, the most forthright young lady that ever lived, watched the act with disguest. "The darned hypocrite!" she snorted. "If people would quite noticing her for just one day, she'd die of a broken heart. She loves the spotlight. We all do. That's why we're actors."

Check, Carole—and I wish more of you were honest enough to admit it!

Alack and alas! Poor Darryl Zanuck! Caught between the devil and the deep blue sea when the women's clubs turned thumbs down on the strip-tease dancer he had signed because of her publicity value, he was forced to change her name. And the great publicity campaign he then launched to make the world Louise Hovick-conscious is not bearing much fruit. Today, I escorted a party of out-of-town guests through the Twentieth Century-Fox studios. We stopped on the set where Miss "Hovick" is working, but my sight-seers were not interested. "Miss Hovick?" they said vaguely. "Never heard of her—say how about showing us that strip-tease girl, Gypsy Rose Lee?"

Private Irks: Those 40-odd-year-old actresses who insist on using itty-bitty baby talk.

The coy, sweet smile that replaces the habitual pout on Simone Simon's face whenever she sees a newspaper scribe on her set.

Those perennial publicity blurbs about Marlene Dietrich's devotion to her husband, Rudolph Sieber.

The professional discourtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studio police, who never pass up a chance to embarrass a visitor.

Big shot novelists who take a fortune from Hollywood and then sneer at the stupidity of the men who paid them.

Bit girls who wear screen make-up on the street to advertise the fact that they are in pictures.

The last minute touchdown that you will see in every football picture screened this fall.

Gayety

"LABOR DAY BEAUTIES," Col. James J. Lake presents a musical extravaganza in two acts and 23 scenes, starring Lillian Dixon and Harry Connelly, supported by Eddie Lloyd, Mac Dennison, Lew Brown, Conny Ryon, Hilda Allison, June Mavis, Peggy Dale, June Darling, Wade and Wade and the Dancing Darlings. Produced by Evelyn Ramsey. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

Another variety show of unusual merit is being offered Gayety fans this week. The entire production is not only well cast but the numerous scenes and musical numbers are original and entertaining in every respect.

Comedy proves the predominating features of the bill, however, as one Harry Connelly, formerly of musical comedy fame, is present and it is with his inimitable brand of wit that the fun stock soars much above that offered in last week's attraction. Aiding Connelly in many of the sketches are Eddie Lloyd and Mac Dennison, whose work shows improvement over former appearances. Lew Brown and Conny Ryon are capable in their straight-man roles, not to mention that Ryon delivers several vocal orations that are much above par.

A "bevy of lovely ladies," including Lillian Dixon, lend much beauty and charm to the lighter moments of the program. Miss Dixon, while appearing to advantage in several musical numbers, also does exceptionally well in the "Vampire" sketch with Connelly. Others who have much to offer in song and dance are Joan Mavis, Hilda Allison, June Darling and Peggy Dale. Miss Dale, who is making her initial bow here, proves a charming young woman with a captivating voice.

What proves to be one of the real highlights on the bill is found in the dancing of Wade and Wade, a sepia pair, who stop the show with their style of Harlem stepping.

This week's show is in every respect a better production than we saw last week. Well, Col. Lake told us such things were going to happen.

New Benny Film Wins 4-Year Job

Because of the sensational reception being given the Jack Benny starring picture, "Artists and Models" in all parts of the United States, Adolph Zukor has signed a contract which will keep Benny under the Paramount banner exclusively for the next four years.

The critical praise and exceptional box-office success of "Artists and Models" have shown that America's No. 1 radio star has definitely established himself, as an equally important motion picture personality.

Under the new contract Benny will be starred in a minimum of two Paramount pictures each year during the four-year period.

Benny and his wife, Mary Livingstone, who soon will be seen in her debut role in films in Paramount's "This Way, Please," now are in Europe on vacation. They will return to Hollywood in late summer so that Benny can start preparations for his next Paramount starring picture, "Music Over America," an original musical comedy on which several writers now are working.

Reports from all parts of the country show that "Artists and Models" is doing a record-breaking business. The picture is in its third week at the New York Paramount Theater.

HELP WANTED: For the past few years the name of David Freedman had been associated with that of the Shubert organization. For many years before his death, Freedman wrote the scripts for the Schuberts' most successful revues—the various Follies, "Life Begins at 8:40" and "The Show Is On" . . . This week another Freedman will contribute that name to the employ of the Shuberts. Mrs. Freedman, David's widow, will be employed in the office of C. P. Greneker, head of the publicity department.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Two years ago a friend of Jed Harris read the script of a new play Sidney Kingsley had written—a play called "Dead End." The friend, who was anxious to have Jed restored to his Broadway glories, wanted Harris to produce that play instead of a dud called "Life's Too Short," which Harris later produced and which flopped. He therefore arranged for Kingsley and the producer to have lunch together, alone . . . The next day he met Harris and asked: "Well, how did you and Kingsley get along?" . . . "Fine," Harris enthused. "He's crazy about it." . . . "Crazy about what?" Jed's pal asked. "About your producing his play?" . . . Oh, no," Harris explained. "He's crazy about my 'Life's Too Short.'"

And the revue might be described as tap-dancing da capo et in excelsis."

Miss Hellman Sails On Visit to Russia

Lillian Hellman, who wrote the scenario for Goldwyn's "Dead End" from the famous stage play by Sidney Kingsley, sailed for a visit to Russia aboard the Normandie Wednesday. Miss Hellman plans to stay abroad from two to five months.

"Dead End," which will have its world premiere at the Rivoli Theater on August 24, co-stars Sylvia Sidney and Joel McCrea. The principal supporting roles are handled by Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor, Allen Jenkins and the "Dead End" kids from the original New York stage cast. William Wyler directed for United Artists release.

Japan Renews 'Big Push' by Land and Sea

2 Armies Drive on Shanghai; Blockade Tightened; Bombers Active.

rushing four new divisions to meet the attack.

After seven hours of battle the Chinese appeared to be holding their own.

The Japanese infantry was fighting from deep trenches parallel to Chinese lines. The Japanese had spent the last three days and nights digging the trenches.

Meanwhile, Japanese naval spokesmen explained that the blockade, formerly extending from Swatow to Shanghai—a stretch of about 800 miles of coastline—would be tripled, virtually isolating China from all but select shipping.

Japanese naval officers were instructed not to interfere with foreign shipping or foreign leased territories, but to stop ships carrying Chinese troops "or ships particularly favorable to the Chinese."

Japan's New Startegy.

The move apparently was the climax of Japan's new strategy, forced by unexpected resistance of Chinese armies which stopped the first Japanese drive at Shanghai and drove the invaders back to the Whangpoo River.

First phase of the drive at Shanghai was an infantry advance to the north from Yangtzepoo in an effort to straighten out the Japanese lines, badly broken by last week's Chinese offensive, and to effect contact with the Japanese regiments which have been fighting their way slowly southward from Woosung between the Whangpoo River and the Shanghai-Woosung Railway.

If this contact is effected the Japanese columns will swing fanwise to the westward, following out the new tactics devised by Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui to counteract the Chinese attack in the Lotien sector.

Beginning of the big push was made possible by the landing of reinforcements at the Wayside and other wharves on the west bank of the Whangpoo River, in the Yangtzepoo district.

The landings were effected without difficulty as the operations of the Japanese bombing planes and a 36-hour barrage from 20 Japanese warships in the river had eliminated all the Chinese salients in this region and engulfed the machine-gun nests which caused heavy casualties to Japanese units landing on the Yangtze River shore, farther northward.

Drive From Tientsin.

The drive from Yangtzepoo hits the weakest point in the Chinese lines since Gen. Chang Chuh-chung, Chinese commander, withdrew a number of regiments from this area last week for his smashing offensive in the Lotien-Woosung sector.

Other developments during the last 24 hours included:

1. The Japanese opened their southward drive from Tientsin toward Shantung Province and atraced the Chinese advanced positions in Machang north of the Yellow River.

2. Both Japan and China delayed replies to demands of the United States, Britain and France that Japan withdraw her warships from immediate vicinity of the Anglo-American area of Shanghai's International Settlement and the French Concession and that China withdraw her troops from the Pootung area so that Occidentals in the foreign areas would not be endangered.

3. With the war spreading to more than half of China, the United States consular service appealed again to all Americans to flee danger areas to seaports from which they can be evacuated.

4. The Chinese admitted the Japanese were extending the war front in South China. They said Japanese warships shelled Sanwei, 80 miles northeast of the British Crown colony of Hongkong, Saturday, and later attacked the towns of Houmen and Makung, where they attempted to land troops. Japanese naval planes bombed Chinese positions around all these cities. There also was fighting at the great South China port of Amoy, and the British destroyer Diamond was sent there from Hongkong to evacuate British nationals.

5. Reports of Soviet Russian military assistance to China continued. The Japanese Domei News Agency said Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang, Chinese vice minister of war, in Nanking, was negotiating with Soviet Gen. Lepin a Chinese-Soviet military understanding.

Soviet Seizes Tokyo Boats.

Tokyo, Sept. 5 (AP).—Domei, Japan's national news agency, in a dispatch from Seishin, Korea, reported today the seizure of five small Japanese or Korean fishing boats by Soviet authorities in waters near the Korean-Siberian boundary.

The Fukuyo Maru, 48-ton Japanese boat, was seized after an attack by Soviet vessels and an airplane, Domei said. She was taken into Possiet Bay. Four smaller boats also were taken into the bay, on the Siberian coast.

The Korean patrol boat Asakaze Maru was nearby but unable to help because she was unarmed.

A little later, the Domei dispatch said, the 50-ton Japanese fishing boat Kaga Maru was attacked and halted by a Soviet vessel. A Russian officer boarded the Japanese ship, where hand-to-hand fighting ensued. When the Asakaze Maru steamed to the rescue the Russian officer fled to his own boat. However, two of the crew of the Kaga Maru were reported missing.

War in British Waters.

Hongkong, China (Monday), Sept. 6 (U.P.).—A Japanese destroyer today seized two Chinese customs cruisers off this British colony, reportedly sinking one of them after an attack in British waters. One Chinese was killed in the attack on the cruisers, the Kwanwei and the Hsukuan. European officers of the customs boats were sent ashore in sampans.

Meanwhile, the Japanese destroyer Yayto bombed Shektan, about 50 miles north of here.

Japan Ponders Ability to Pay For China War

Finance Minister Demands $592,000,000, 9-Point Emergency Program.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Sept. 5.—Rumblings of alarm over the nation's capacity to finance war sounded in the lower house of Parliament today as Finance Minister Okinobu Kaya laid the huge China war appropriations before the extraordinary "war session" and asked approval.

He presented a supplementary budget totaling $592,000,000, which will bring the empire's war bill up to ¥737,000,000.

Opening of interpellations showed members of the lower house anxious about the capacity of the country to digest the huge bond issues necessary to finance the campaigns in China without dangerous inflation.

The finance minister declared the government would do all it could to prevent a rise in the price level. He told the House of Representatives he was unable to say whether bond issues or higher taxes would supply most of the necessary funds for the China conflict.

The government introduced nine bills, providing:

1. For issuance of bonds to cover military expenditures.
2. For special military accounts.
3. Exemption from taxation of men serving at the front.
4. Government control and adjustment of capital and funds.
5. Amendment of the foreign exchange control law.
6. Emergency rice distributions.
7. Control of the fertilizer industry.
8. Government supervision of imports and exports.
9. Government control of shipping.

Gen. Gen Sugiyama, army minister, reported on war operations and said reinforcements were being added steadily to the force in China.

Chinese Collect $4,500 Here, Tell Dictator It Is His Chinese in this city officially notified Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek yesterday that their contributions to China's defense, totaling over $4,500, are at his disposal.

For the past month money has been pouring into an old Chinese tea shop at 607 H street northwest, now the headquarters of the D. C. Anti-Japanese Aggression League. Men have been giving freely from savings intended for their families in the homeland, children have turned in their pennies, and Americans, too, have contributed generously. From the Lotus Restaurant alone where 35 Chinese are employed there has come $1,300.

Well-organized committees of the league hold weekly meetings at the above address to plan the campaign in support of the government in China. They expect each Chinese to give 10 per cent of his wages monthly, although in the first month's report the average of $6 a person is far above the $1 each pledged by the 700 Chinese people in Washington.

The telegram address to "The Chinese Central Government, care of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, read as follows: "$4,508.60 United States currency for defense fund. Deposited same in New York China Bank." It was signed "The Chinese National Salvation Association."

Mrs. A. M. Mertens To Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna M. Mertens, 64, president of the John P. Agnew Coal Co., who died Saturday at her home, 4900 Quebec street northwest, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today in St. Ann's Church. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Surviving are a stepson, Frederick A. Mertens, jr.; two sisters, Mrs. Milton R. Quigley, Washington, and Miss Katherine M. Moore, Cumberland, Md., and a brother, Thomas F. Moore, Cumberland.

Japanese Afraid To Mix It, Say Wounded Foes

Invaders Depend on Long-Range Guns, Shanghai Defenders Claim.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Sept. 5.—Chinese defenders of this war-torn city showed little respect today for the Japanese soldier's reputed valor as a fighting man.

Wounded men in Chinese military hospitals scornfully declared the Japanese invaders would not fight them hand-to-hand.

Instead, they asserted, Japanese military and naval units deliberately avoided personal contact and tried to wipe out the Chinese troops with artillery, machine guns and planes.

Among thousands of Chinese troops passing through hospitals, a majority were suffering from shrapnel wounds.

This was attributed first to the fact that excessively hot weather causes the Chinese soldier to throw aside his heavy steel helmet and fight bareheaded; and secondly, to the Japanese reliance on long-range fighting with their naval guns and air bombs.

Thrice-Wed Delphine Dodge To Make Jack Doyle Her 4th

Motor Heiress and Boxer-Actor Serve Notice on Present Mates They Will Seek Reno Divorce Whether or No.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell Baker Godde, one of the Nation's wealthiest women, said today she was going to get a divorce "as soon as possible" from Timothy Godde, former New York banker, and marry Jack Doyle, whose versatility takes in boxing, acting, singing and other accomplishments.

"Certainly, we're going to get married," she told a reporter at the home of her friend, Madeline Goron. "I flew in here late last night and am going to fly to San Francisco tomorrow. Jack is going to meet me there. Then we'll go on to Reno. Jack stayed in San Francisco to play golf today."

Mrs. Godde said she and Doyle were waiting for Godde and Judith Allen, screen actress and Doyle's present wife, to return signed releases of "no contest" so that they could get divorces. She said they had "served the required time" in Reno and were considered residents of Nevada.

Mrs. Godde, wearing an Alice blue chiffon negligee, opened a can of beer. She said she and Doyle, handsome former Irish guardsman; Miss Goron and Jimmy McElveen, Doyle's companion, started for San Francisco with five bottles of champagne, but that there was one pint left. She said she and Miss Goron came down here to rest.

Japanese Return Y.M.C.A. Building

Tientsin, Sept. 5 (AP).—Japanese army officers who "borrowed" the $50,000 Y. M. C. A. Building here for 36 days returned it today to its secretary, Charles Hall, of Worcester, Mass.

Outside of some shell damage to the roof and the radio broadcaster being smashed, the building was in virtually as good condition as when the Japanese took it over for army headquarters.

This old police blotter shows the Capital sometimes misbehaved in 1863 even as now. Note entry at bottom of page telling how a woman was arrested for intoxication, long before the cocktail was invented.

By Charles Stofberg.

Proof that times were much the same in 1863 as today is vividly demonstrated in musty old police records at the First Precinct. People violated the Ten Commandments with as much facility in the "good old days" as in 1937.

Men — and women, too — got drunk, stole, had sunstrokes and in various other ways got their names on the police blotter. The only difference seems to have been they didn't get their pictures in the rogues' gallery—but merely because there wasn't any rogues' gallery.

The auto thief of today is commonplace as a horse thief yesterday. Swearing seemed to have been more disapproved then, if not more common than today.

On August 3, 1863, a housewife of Irish extraction was brought to the station for using profanity. She was fined $1.58. This was a very frequent cause of arrest. The fine, however, was never more than $1.58.

The magistrate was pretty hard on horse thieves. One English soldier was arrested for grand larceny (of a horse) and sent to jail. It never was recorded that he was released. Others got stiff sentences.

Listed in the book are Washington's 1863 commercial houses: "Liquors, not less than a pint, stores, of these there were 34; 4 billiard saloons, 1 ten-pin alley, 1 livery stable, 50 taverns, 41 "Goods, Wares, and Merchandise," and 17 "Hats, Caps, Boots and Shoes Establishments."

One early entry is that of William H. Smith, who journeyed all the way to Washington from Canada only to be arrested for sleeping on the streets. The magistrate had pity and dismissed him.

Every once in a while one single line in the book stated that "Dr. Newman called at the station." He apparently was the station physician who made a weekly check on the prisoners.

One entry stated:

"Officers Voss, Nally and Simon discovered the Carpenter Shop of Downing & Bros., on Tenth street, between G and H, east side, to be on fire, when they extinguished it and saved the property."

Firefighting and the saving of property in burning houses was one of the policemen's major duties.

On Thursday, July 16, 1863, six United States soldiers were brought into custody and charged with disorderly conduct and intoxication. This was at 6 p. m. At 7 p. m. a liquor salesman was brought into the station and charged with selling liquor to soldiers. He was fined $21.

Did children get themselves lost in those days? Naturally.

"A lost boy child was brought in by Officer McDonald found on Fifteenth and New York avenue about 3 years of age. His father came and took him away."

Chiang Named War Dictator; Forms Council

Given Absolute Power to Regulate Every Phase of Chinese Life.

By the United Press.

Nanking, Sept. 5.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has been named absolute dictator of China for the period of the war and has created a supreme war council with himself as its head, diplomats understood tonight.

The action was taken by the central executive committee of the Kuomintang — government political party.

Plans for the supreme war council were elaborated two months ago with the aid of German military advisers to the government who drew on experiences of the allied and associated powers in the World War.

The generalissimo, as head of the council, has absolute power to regulate every phase of Chinese life.

The council includes six departments or "affairs bureaus," as follows: War, economics, foreign affairs, propaganda, mass training and communications.

Either T. V. Soong, Chiang's brother-in-law and present governor of the Bank of China, or Wu Ting-chang, minister of industry, will head the vital economics department, which will control all phases of financial and commercial life.

Thieves Employ Holiday Exodus To Get $5,000

A series of robberies and holdups here yesterday netted more than $5,000 as thousands of Washingtonians vacated their homes for the Labor Day week-end.

Commander C. J. Odend'hal, of the United States Coast Guard, reported to police clothing and jewelry valued at approximately $1,500 had been taken from his home, 4512 Hoban road northwest.

Odend'hal returned from a day's trip to the mountains to discover that someone had gained entrance through a basement door and taken a fur coat, men's clothing and gold uniform buttons and insignia.

Articles taken in holdups and robberies included cameras, watches, jewelry, autos and clothing.

Tear Gas Urged Instead of Guns In Labor Strife

A recommendation that gas be used instead of bullets by police handling industrial disputes was made yesterday by a citizens' joint commission asked to investigate the memorial Day incident in Chicago which cost ten lives.

The commission's report, published yesterday, recommended policemen be "equipped with gas and trained in its use." Even gas, the report said, should be used only when required for protection of life and property and should be of a type that leaves no permanent effects.

Capt. James L. Mooney, supervisor of the Chicago police department, was strongly censured in the report.

The commission contended gas equipment and knowledge by police of its use would have prevented the fatalities.

3 Officials Deny Airport Will Close

Possibility the Washington-Hoover airport would close tomorrow to force Government improvement of the field, disclosed ysterday through a source claiming official knowledge of the action, was denied last night by one airport official and two members of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

S. J. Solomon, airport superintendent, said no action would be taken to close the airport, and Charles I. Stanton and M. V. Fredenhagen, both of the Bureau of Air Commerce, said they had received no report of a move to close the field.

American Describes Victories Over 8 Spanish Rebel Planes

Frank Tinker Returns After Service With Loyalists; Saw Crash of Dahl, Now in Insurgent Prison.

plane wings for two rockets that spelled an alarm, sudden twisting dog-fights, the cloudy days that meant rest and the clear days that meant fighting and a friend dropping from the fight to fall in enemy territory.

Tinker tells this gradually, controlling his voice as he controls the occasional shaking of his hands. The nervousness came after he left the fighting. He felt it starting when he reached France, and he remembered a day when he was riding into Madrid and the bombs began to drop on each side of the road. "High overhead two enemy bombers flying abreast were dropping a line of bombs along the road. We jumped out of the car and lay down in the ditch until it was over. No one was hit, but I think we were slightly shell shocked."

Took Assumed Name.

A graduate of Annapolis in 1933, Tinker learned to fly at Pensacola. He decided last fall to go to Spain. He wrote to Mexico City for a passport and a new name, Francisco Gomez Trejo, and with these sailed from New York in December, reaching Spain January 2.

Three days after he reached the front Tinker met Hernandez Diaz, who turned out to be "Whitey." Together they were assigned to the Esquadrilla de la Calla.

He saw "Whitey" shot down the first time in February. They were flying together when three of the enemy swooped down on them. Tinker fought one of them off and the two others sent Whitey down. That time he landed behind his own lines and flew again the next day.

On the evening of July 10, three of the pilots, Tinker, "Whitey" and one other, went to Madrid to celebrate. The party ended in a fight with three civilian guards. The Americans won, but the following day Tinker flew with one eye closed. The day after that he saw "Whitey" shot down for the last time.

Shot Down Eight Planes.

In his eight months in Spain Tinker spent 191 hours and 20 minutes in the air, took part in 32 bombardment flights, shot down 8 recorded enemy planes, fired more than 300,000 machine gun bullets and on his own guess accounted for around 2,000 enemy soldiers.

He was wounded by a pistol bullet through the right side of his chest and sent to the hospital for four days. He brought home the shirt he was wearing when shot.

The picture of the fighting comes out in Tinker's own description of a dog-fight. In a letter he wrote:

"Way off to the right I saw the enemy, in three tiers of seven planes each. At the same time I saw one of our other patrols closing in with the first of the enemy echelons. More of our patrols were coming up a little farther back, all of them 500 to 1,500 meters below my outfit. I turned to the right, putting my six planes in battle formation as we swung around, also going into a slight dive for more speed. I was about half-way to the scene when our first three planes went into action against the first seven enemy planes.

Planes Collide, Explode.

"There was a fierce scramble for a few seconds, then two of the Heinkels and one of our planes came wavering out of the mixture. Our plane, however, recovered for a moment and suddenly came around in a sharp left chandelle and collided head-on with one of the Heinkels still in combat.

"Talk about an explosion. Even in the bright sunlight I was blinded for a moment. Then there was nothing of the two to be seen except a few pieces of wings slowly going down, turning over and over like pieces of cardboard thrown from a high window.

"By this time more of our planes had arrived and engaged the second and what was left of the first enemy elements. I took my outfit over and pounced on the third and last echelon of enemy planes.

"Here accurate description is impossible. Green planes with black emblems slide across the cross-wires. One comes directly toward me and I can see the flashes of his guns (I suppose he could also see mine) then I see metal fly from the left side of his motor, followed by water and black smoke and a slowing down of his propeller. As he slides past he goes into a sort of sliding roll and starts down. I turn my attention to others.

"A burst here and a burst there. We are going at such tremendous speeds that more is very rarely possible. I look around and note with relief that all of my men are still intact and doing well. The enemy starts diving away so we follow them down. They dive faster than we do and most of them get away. I see that we have plenty of men below, so pull up and organize formation again at 1,500 meters. No need of it, however. The only enemy planes in sight are two who are cornered in a valley below and they are polished off as I watch.

"Back to home fields to await reports from observers up front, and what reports—five Heinkels down on field of battle, three more unable to get home on account of punctured pilots, gas tanks, etc.

A Pilot's Heroism.

"We have only lost one plane, the one which collided. And that pilot certainly should be recorded in the annals of aerial warfare. Later examination showed he had been shot through the jugular vein. His maneuvers afterward showed that, seeing he was finished, he deliberately rammed an enemy plane before passing out altogether."

Tinker records one of the big battles near Madrid briefly. For him it started with a trip to Madrid to have two teeth pulled. Then for three days cloudy skies gave the airmen a rest, followed by several days of dodging bombs and chasing bombers.

He notes "Spent an hour in bomb cellar and then went to bed anyway. Too cold." The bomb shelters were narrow trenches, 3 feet wide and 6 deep, braced with timbers, covered with some composition material and concealed with dirt.

"Warning of an approaching bombardment was usually given by our German police dog, Tarzan. He had been bombed so often that he could sense the enemy planes long before we heard them. Then he would start barking—it was the only time he sounded off—and that was the signal for everyone to dive for shelter. Tarzan was always first to reach the cellar."

Hit by Gunfire.

On the day of the big battle they took off at 8:30 for a time bombardment of the enemy. "We bombed, saw fine dog fight in the distance, M. G.ed enemy once and so back home."

"M. G.ing the enemy" meant diving down at a concentration of troops or a trench, firing a burst of machine-gun fire, and then pulling away.

This was a favorite game, played particularly when the enemy were annoying them with anti-aircraft fire. In the last months, Tinker said, their gunners became uncomfortably accurate. To discourage that, the pilots would M. G. the ground troops. "The troops were the goats, but finally they got the idea, and only fired anti-aircraft guns when there was a good chance of hitting something."

He wrote of diving on a trench one day when "a burst of A. A. fire went off about 10 meters on my port beam. Broke the left side of the windshield and filled left side of plane full of holes. Fortunately neither engine or self hit." While he was at the front, only two of their planes were brought down by anti-aircraft guns, he said.

Italians Capture Italians.

The battle was over when he wrote "Italians seem to be running out of Guadalajara as fast as possible."

We learned later that several hundred Italian rebel soldiers were captured by the Garibaldi battalion, Italian loyalists. The prisoners couldn't believe they were taken by Italians. All the enlisted men thought they were fighting in Ethiopia."

Tinker said his days off in Madrid were sometimes as exciting as those in the air.

"We had the best of everything. They gave us front rooms in the best hotel. They faced the street, but they faced the guns too, and all the old customers had taken the inside rooms.

Narrow Escape From Shells.

"One night a shell landed in my bathtub, and blew two bottles of whisky right out in the street. We threw a party for Ernest Hemingway the night before he left for America, and the following evening a shell landed in the room where we had the party and blew the room to pieces.

"One bomb broke my favorite window in the hotel, where I used to sit and read. The bomb struck the sidewalk. Nearby a newsboy stood watching it, too scared to move. I never exploded, but a fragment of the sidewalk broke the window.

"When I left Madrid everything was wide open. Night clubs were packed every evening, and the street cars ran all night with every light on. The people don't worry very much. I saw Charlie Chaplin in 'Modern Times' and three bombs hit the upper floors of the building during the show. The building shook, but no one left the show."

Predicts Rebel Defeat.

Tinker said the rebels have no chance of winning the war. "For every bomb the loyalists get more volunteers. They have plenty of food and plenty of equipment. I don't know where they're getting it, but as long as they have it they're going to keep on. Their air force now is almost entirely Spanish, with better planes and better pilots than the enemy. They can't lose the war."

Tinker was the last American pilot to leave the loyalist air force. Shortly before he left he recorded, "Escorting bombers and saw no enemy planes. They've probably run out of them."

He left Spain August 13 for Paris, where he ran into the toughest fight of the war trying to get a passport home. Finally the consul escorted him aboard ship at Cherbourg, gave his passport to the steward. The passport was classed as baggage and locked up.

Tinker enjoyed one party in Paris—with an American pilot who had been serving with the rebels at Madrid. They exchanged drinks and experiences at Harry's Bar, figured that Tinker might easily have shot the other down. He had been shot through the knee and sent to Paris on leave.

Then a boat to New York and a car to Washington. He left here for an unknown destination "to rest and get back in shape."

100 Indians Hold U.S. Posts Serving Their Own People

By the Associated Press.

More than 100 educated Indians holding Government jobs in Washington discount the old idea the American aborigine hangs his college diploma on a totem pole.

In 1933 only 11 Indians worked in the Washington office of the Indian Service. Now they hold more than one-third of the 300 jobs.

Most of the Indians have minor posts now, although nine have reached the important executive position of reservation superintendent and 14 others are "second in command" as chief clerks.

Wounded Man Held In Woman's Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—Mrs. Emma Jenkins, 35, was shot to death at a suburban quarry settlement here today and Tony Sexor, 65, a quarry worker attentive to her was in custody, in a hospital suffering from wounds received when Bert Frankenberry, of this city, grappled with him after the shooting, police said.

Maj. Brown's Report.

In his annual report to the District Commissioners, the Superintendent of Police makes several recommendations, all but one of which may be indorsed without reservation.

His request for legislation to prevent picketing of foreign embassies needs no further argument than the fact that official guests of the United States are fully entitled to protection from such indecent annoyances. Maj. Brown's suggestion for the regulation of wrestling in the District is also reasonable. Boxing here is supervised by a commission; there is at least as much reason for wrestling, with its less savory reputation, to be similarly controlled.

The recommendation that a committee be appointed to study the Police Department's housing needs is not subject to criticism, as anyone who has entered the present dilapidated headquarters building will readily testify. And the request for 100 additional policemen is more modest than was expected.

Exception, however, must be taken to the superintendent's plea for action on the bill, pigeon-holed by Congress at the last session, which would empower the police to arrest holders of "numbers" slips. Everyone would like to see elimination of the "numbers" racket, which daily mulcts thousands of Washingtonians who can least afford to lose money. But the bill, as the new chairman of the House District Committee has properly emphasized, proposes a radical departure from the usual grounds for search and seizure.

Under Maj. Brown's direction, the police would doubtless refrain from abusing the broad powers contemplated for them in the bill. But the department might in future find itself under less conscientious leadership, which might not be scrupulous about constitutional guaranties in its enthusiasm to produce evidence for prosecution of the "numbers" or any other racket.

The police are doing splendid work now in discouraging organized gambling in the city. Last year's court decision defining the "numbers" game as a lottery gave them a valuable new weapon. The department's success, too, in breaking up the race-betting organizations of the city has probably had a discouraging effect on the "numbers" racketeers here. The two gyp games were closely related.

Let the police, then, continue without the search and arrest powers they request. It may mean that the "numbers" racket will not disappear so quickly. But this would be a small price to pay for maintaining the integrity of one of the cardinal articles of the Bill of Rights.

British Labor's Realism.

In the decade and a half following the Armistice, no group anywhere in the world more consistently and persistently supported the cause of disarmament than did the British Labor Party. One of its great leaders, Mr. Arthur Henderson, presided over the world disarmament conference and to his dying day sought courageously but vainly to breathe life into that corpse.

Now this party has abandoned the struggle, for reasons that do credit to the realism of the British Socialists and their understanding of present trends in world affairs. In the face of the repeated aggressions of certain nations, notably Japan, Italy and Germany, disarmament, they feel, has become an utterly unrealizable ideal. If peace is to be preserved it can only be done through collective action. Nor must there be any flinching from the possibility that such action may require the use of force.

This point is made with very considerable emphasis in the statement of policy issued by the National Council of Labor, which represents the General Council of the Trade Union Congress, the Labor Party and its representatives in Parliament. Recognizing the existence of international injustices, this statement takes the stand that nations harboring such grievances should be invited to state their case, and through the League of Nations be "offered a new system of political security and economic opportunity."

But the spokesmen of British labor recognize the fact that the "have-not" nations may refuse to pursue any such peaceful course; that they may employ war as the instrument of their policy as indeed, on more than one occasion, they have already done. In that case, says the Council, the answer of the rest of the world should be plain and unmistakable. Aggressors should be confronted through the League of Nations with the "emphatic superiority of armed force." And because of this belief the Council makes it very clear that there will be no opposition by British Laborites to the present rearmament program.

In view of what is happening in China and Spain today and what has happened in Ethiopia and elsewhere it is difficult to see what other stand the British Laborites could have taken. The point has been reached in world affairs where either the aggressors must be restrained from doing any further violence to the structure of peace or unrestrained anarchy will become the order of the day.

Those of our own professional pacifists who continue to live in a world of illusions can profit from the striking but justified change of heart of peace lovers across the sea.

Labor's Balance Sheet.

Never before, in the half century since Labor Day originated, have there been such widespread and far-reaching gains for organized labor to celebrate as is the case today. By the same token, organized labor today is faced by greater responsibilities, and perhaps by greater dangers, than ever before.

At a new summit of achievement, its leaders can look forward with some assurance to continued advances. But they would be harboring a fatal illusion if they minimized the pitfalls ahead. Thus, while this day may well be one of legitimate pride and satisfaction to the labor movement, it should also be a day of thought-taking and heart-searching.

Since Labor Day a year ago organized labor is believed to have doubled its ranks. The membership of the A. F. of L., C. I. O. and other unions is now estimated in excess of 7,000,000, which compares with a peak of around 5,000,000 in World War days. To this striking development many factors have contributed.

No small measure of credit belongs to John L. Lewis and his lieutenants of the C. I. O. That organization has performed the remarkable and long-needed task of organizing large numbers of workers in the hitherto unorganized mass-production industries. Mr. Lewis has justification for claiming that the purposes and objectives of the C. I. O. find "economic, social, political and moral justification in the hearts of the millions who are its members and the millions more who support it."

But the gains made by the C. I. O. and of American labor generally during the past year were made possible by a combination of factors of which the C. I. O.'s efforts were only one. In the ranks of industry there are many enlightened leaders who have seen that the fight so long waged against collective bargaining was, in the long run, as dangerous as it was bound to be futile. And, above all, labor's principal ally in the struggle for betterment has been public opinion.

The American people and their chosen representatives are convinced that in only one way can the balance between capital and labor be maintained. They are firm in their conviction that the workers, individually helpless against an employer, should be allowed to organize and thus be able to deal collectively with industry. This principle has now been incorporated in law, its constitutionality upheld by the Supreme Court.

The dam of obstructionism long maintained against unionization is giving way. This does not mean, however, that obstruction is a thing of the past. On the contrary, the very successes made by organized labor during the past years have given rise to new efforts to smash unionism. Some of these, it is clear, are as unjustified legally as they are morally pernicious.

But it is not this new type of obstructionism which constitutes the greatest danger to the unionization movement, now running at full tide. The real enemy is within. The real enemy is the recklessness which only too often is the child of rapid triumph. Flushed with the gains made during the past year, some of the leaders of labor have tended to overreach themselves, and, like certain of the industrialists, to throw sanity and reason to the winds. Yet, as President Roosevelt rightly pointed out in his Labor Day message, both sanity and reason are essential if industrial peace is to be maintained, if we are to have that "happy consummation when bitterness and distrust shall be replaced by mutual respect between workman and employer."

One can accept as valid Mr. Lewis' fervid denials of any relationship between the C. I. O. and communism. The American people know how frequently red-baiting is employed as a smoke-screen in this manner. The majority of them will agree with Mr. Lewis that "unionization, as opposed to communism, presupposes the relationship of employment; it is based upon the wage system and it recognizes fully and unreservedly the institution of private property and the right of investment profit."

The fact remains, however, that certain of the tactics tolerated by the C. I. O. are not in accord with that philosophy. The C. I. O. could not have attained its present strength without the acquiescence of enlightened employers and the sympathy of public opinion. The loss of such allies, as a result of overambitious and irresponsible leadership, would unquestionably destroy what is, by and large, a hopeful movement.

The increasing bitterness between labor factions is another fundamental weakness which industrial statesmanship must seek to overcome. There is room in the labor movement both for the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. type of unions. Peace between them would benefit both. On the other hand, a reckless war for mastery, with personal ambitions dominant, might again produce the utter wreckage with which the history of the labor movement in this country is strewn.

The events of the past year have illustrated the effectiveness of labor's demand for a more equitable distribution of the national income. The insistence on labor's duty to maintain and increase that income has not been so pronounced. In asserting its power it would be fatal to labor's case to ignore its increasingly great responsibilities. Yet to do so is clearly the tendency of today.

The End Of Mother Goose.

The late Mr. Chesterton in his autobiography mentions a little tantrum he had at the age of 4 or thereabouts. It was provoked by his desire for a certain hat, and he tells how he spread consternation among his Victorian elders by shrieking: "If you don't give it me, I'll say 'at!" But he goes on to observe:

"This care about education and diction, though I can see much to criticize in it now, did really have its good side. It meant that my father knew all his English literature backwards, and that I knew a great deal of it by heart, long before I could really get it into my head. I knew pages of Shakespeare's blank verse without a notion of the meaning of it."

Mrs. Kathryn Worth, a contemporary American poet, evidently thinks that, instead of saying either hat or 'at, the child should be taught to call it "this bowl that spills the honey of my hair." In the current Atlantic Monthly Mrs. Worth tells how she taught her daughter first to enjoy poetic cadence and then to believe that poetry has nothing to do with rhymes or meter or message—that "the one indispensable element in imaginative poetry is symbol, or metaphor." So when the little girl was 1:

"I began reading aloud to her the greatest imaginative poetry with as much expression as if I were reading to a grown person. I went over and over lyric passages of Shakespeare. Through baby ears she listened with that curious, unwavering attention small children are capable of. I had no especial theories of psychology. I merely knew that primary impressions on neurones are perhaps most influential."

It was heady, 120 proof stuff, too, that Mrs. Worth read aloud to her baby out of Shakespeare, Keats, Marvel, Blake, Coleridge, Robinson and others, "always avoiding the second-rate or ordinary." By the time the infant was 2½ she was able, "with apparent gusto," to inform all and sundry that "Life's but a walking shadow" and all the rest of it. When one evening the child observed on her own that "the lamp shade is a skirt for the light to wear" Mrs. Worth knew that her teaching had succeeded. The editor of the Atlantic Monthly is not quite certain. The daughter, now 8, he says, "is by this time a fairly reliable critic."

Not until the child was 6 did Mrs. Worth think it safe to let her have "Mother Goose." Sure enough, the little girl, who had known at 2½ that life is, among other things, a "tale told by an idiot," perceived at once that "Mother Goose" is not poetry, but "just good little stories."

To start an infant off on the wrong foot with things like "Hickory, Dickery, Dock" or "Little Miss Muffet," Mrs. Worth explains, is to encourage them to believe that "poetry is primarily a rhymed narrative." With this sad fallacy in their little heads, it is scarcely any wonder that some of them should presently take to reading the "Canterbury Tales," or the "Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner" or even, alas, Pope's translation of the "Iliad."

Parents are peculiar people. They encourage their 3-year-old girl to "show off" before company, and ten years later they wonder why they can't do a thing in the world with her.

A Columbia professor says the average man can tell all he knows in two hours. After that, he sets in talking about women.

"Unquestionably no one but a fool is certain about anything," declares a college professor, who seems to be certain about it.

A man has to have something to carry around on his shoulders. If he hasn't a head, he carries a large and prominent chip.

Constantly advancing prices of meats may divide the people into two classes: those with large incomes, and vegetarians.

"Women are taking their places in the sun," declares a sister columnist. So we've been noticing.

Cruel To The Public.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Massachusetts legislator has introduced a bill to compel film stars to use their real names rather than "phony ones to deceive the public." The idea is cruel, not only to the stars but to the public as well.

Think of the heartache and sacrifice that would be involved in replacing the romantic name of Gary Cooper with plain, prosaic Frank J. Cooper. Imagine the alliterative loss of having to learn to say Greta Gustaffsen for Greta Garbo. Conceive, if you can, of the wasted euphony in substituting Katherine Mielziner for Kay Francis.

A rose by any other name might be just as sweet, but not a movie star. What if we had to say Muni Weisenfreund instead of Paul Muni; Anna La Hiff instead of Nancy Carroll, Lucille Langhanke instead of Mary Astor, or Mary Magdalene von Losch instead of Marlene Dietrich?

Perish the thought! Instead of reforming the movie field, we might extend the idea of inventing euphonious names to other fields. It would be a pleasure, for example, to have an all-American football team with the members' names all pronounceable.

"The White Man's Burden."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Why all this excitement about Japan in China? Is the white race not entirely responsible for the present Japanese aggression in poor exploited China? It was the white race which virtually forced and took Japan under its tutelage (the Dutch in 1600 and our own Commodore Perry in 1853) and ever since then Japan has proved a very apt pupil, and at times has shown more wisdom than its teachers.

At present all Japan wants is a share in "carrying the white mans' burden," which in plain English means exploiting inferior races and nations, in which England has been the chief leader, and which has enriched that nation beyond the dreams of avarice. The greatest jolt England received in that line was when our 13 colonies refused to be exploited, but insisted upon carrying their own burden, which led to war and gave birth to our Union.

The next aggrandizement of Japan was when mighty England formed an alliance with Asiatic Japan, against Caucasian Russia, but the height of stupidity and folly of European statesmen was reached when they permitted Japan to enter the late World War, and as a reward Japan received some of the war plunder forced from the Germans—islands in the southern seas—little dreaming by doing so they were just digging deeper the grave for the white man's domination of the earth.

If the war-crazed nations in Europe carry out their threat of slaughtering each other, the "Yellow Peril" will be upon us, and the white race will deserve no better.

A Boarding House View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In connection with Southerners' protest of Sheila Barrett's impersonation at a local theater this past week:

I came here from the South about 31 years ago myself and at times have had as many as a dozen rooming houses, in some of which I also served meals. With the exception of two years during this period of time I have had not less than two rooming houses, but never in my life have I had to contend with such trash, both male and female, as has been brought here by the New Deal. There is no exaggeration in Miss Barrett's impersonation of a Southern girl drinking. Most of them drink all kinds of liquor like water.

There are thousands of intelligent, capable people in Washington, D. C., right now unemployed who were formerly faithful, competent civil service employes, but were put out of their positions to make room for trashy, shiftless, filthy and ignorant political appointees brought in from the slums of the 48 States evidently only because of their political connections.

Although I have always been a Democrat politically because I was born in the South and still have relatives there, I must admit that when the Republicans are in power, the political appointees that I have come in contact with have always been intelligent, neat, clean and made desirable tenants in my rooming houses; only once did I have occasion to order a Republican political appointee to vacate my rooming house. I later also found out he was fired from the office where he was working even though he did come in as a political appointee.

"The Old 97."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of September 2 there is a very interesting story of the retirement of David War Tuck, an engineer on the Southern Railway, and a statement by him that he and a friend, David George, were the authors of the song, "The Wreck of Old 97," Mr. Tuck stating that George wrote the words and he (Tuck) wrote the music.

I call your attention to the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of Victor Talking Machine Co. v. George, 69 Fed. (2) 871.

That decision (which, by the way, makes interesting reading) held that George was not the author of the song in 1903, as he claimed, and showed conclusively that in 1927, after the recording of the song on talking machine records, George copied the words from a record and attempted to force the Victor Co. to pay him royalties on the records. George testified in the trial of the case that he had written the words and that the musical bars and notes of his song were traced over carbon paper from a sheet of music of "The Ship Never Returned." So if Mr. Tuck wrote the music to the Old 97 song he must also have been the author of the "missing ship" music, which I believe has for many years been credited to some one other than Mr. Tuck.

Watts Run Floods.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The flood that swept the valley of Watts Run in the Northeast section of the city, August 26, was the worst on record. The newspapers carried lengthy accounts and pictures of the fire department rescuing citizens from their submerged homes. The valley was a shambles. Many lost their meager earthly belongings in that flood. One life was lost. The water was 3 to 5 feet deep on Deane avenue, and all traffic, including streetcars, was stopped. Over the lowlands the water was 5 to 6 feet deep. Foundations have been undermined, buildings swept away and property ruined.

This catastrophe is repeated regularly, yet we have been appealing in vain for flood relief for the past 15 years. Maj. John Gottwalls, when Engineer Commissioner, had studies made of this flood relief problem by the office of the Sanitary Engineer, who has made surveys, maps, drawings and estimate of cost. Secretary Ickes offered to provide PWA money for flood relief of this valley if the Commissioners of the District of Columbia would request same. But notwithstanding that our petition has been renewed several times each year we are unable to win the support of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The problem consists of straightening, widening, deepening and paving the invert of Watts Run. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will purchase the additional land necessary for straightening stream bed. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia will perform the construction work. WPA or relief money can be used on this project, as it will provide several months' work for several hundred unemployed. This stream, the second largest in the District, extends three miles from the Anacostia River to Seat Pleasant and Capitol Heights in Maryland.

We are asking that all fair-minded citizens whose souls are touched by the distress of these stricken colored citizens appeal to the authorities to provide flood relief for the valley of Watts Run.

Radios In Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In every trolley car we see the requirement that the passengers shall not talk to the car operators because their full attention is needed for their work. Could we be adequately safe if radios were installed in the trolley cars for the enjoyment of operators?

If radio apparatus is not allowed in the trolley cars in the interest of public safety, why are the taxi drivers and the private automobiles allowed to use them without limitation? Their responsibility is just as—if not more—serious and their full attention is undeniably still more needed for their work of driving, especially in such an overcrowded city as Washington.

I wonder how many accidents are due to this unsuspected public enemy.

A Universal Religion?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am writing to you regarding a matter which I believe may be of supreme importance. I wish that it might be possible to secure the views of your readers in this instance.

The Institute of Human Relations held each year at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., shows that true usefulness lies in developing viewpoints of an opposite character such as those centering around the meaning of religion, revelation, unity, etc.

If the purpose of the institute is to provide a bulwark against racial oppression is it possible to do this by multiplicity of religions? Tolerance is not sufficient and hasn't the power to accomplish this purpose, for it requires a fundamental cementing on behalf of reality. This requires a universal religion.

"Unusual Experience in Paris"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to recommend to all your readers the unusual film, "From Tsar to Lenin." Seeing it has reminded me of an unusual experience I had in Paris some 10 or 12 years ago when the horrors of the Russian revolution and the miraculous escapes of the Russian nobility were still fresh in our minds.

I was invited by some Russian friends to a private showing at the Salle Gervais of some old Russian news reels which had been salvaged and brought safely to Paris. One of the things I shall always remember about that evening was the line of taxicabs parked at the entrance of the Salle Gervais. Their chauffeurs, all former army officers and high officials of the old Tsarist regime, were taking an hour off to view the performance. The pictures were odd bits of news reels, some of which are included in the film now showing at the Rialto, but all taken before the revolution, of course.

There were brief glimpses of magnificent palaces; the famous turnip shaped church domes silhouetted against a stormy sky; the Winter Palace and parade grounds of St. Petersburg; Cossack regiments, each man standing as rigid as a bronze figure, their long, full-skirted coats sweeping the ground; the lovely gardens of Tsarskoe-Selo; the Czarina and royal princesses wearing huge hats dripping with ostrich feathers.

The films were old and often jerky and the fashions of 1912 looked grotesque but there was no murmur of amusement from the audience. They sat silent and absorbed, drinking in the sketchy glimpses of once familiar scenes, recalling the past, filling in the breaks from their store of memories. We were all more or less carried away in those days by the tragic but none-the-less romantic status of the Russian emigres, and to me, a "foreigner," the audience itself was as fascinating as the film.

It took but a little stretch of imagination for me to see in the sad-eyed, plainly dressed collection of men and women around me a courtly throng dressed in brilliant uniforms, beautiful gowns and glittering jewels. The picture ended with a close-up of the imperial Russian flag flying over the fortress of SS. Peter and Paul. The whole audience rose and the orchestra struck the opening chords of the Russian national anthem. Their voices, those magnificent Russian voices, joined and blended in a vast melody of sound. It was one of the most inspiring moments I have ever witnessed. Everyone was singing from the depths of his heart, from his very soul; not like broken-spirited exiles, but proud Russian patriots.

Then back they went, still proudly, to their waiting taxicabs and attic rooms.

Bean Hole

Following is a letter published by G. C. L. in his column, "The Lighter Side," appearing in the Hartford Courant.

Dear G. C. L.: Capt. Yardarm's most recent culinary experiment was such a triumph that I have begged him to let me describe it to you.

A week ago the captain asked me to find a pot big enough to hold a lot of beans and "plenty of salt pork, for a change." A 2-gallon crock was the largest vessel that the storekeeper could find in the dusty recess of his back room, and the captain approved but wished it might have been a real pot of the same size.

The captain then asked for 3 pounds of marrow beans soaked over night and boiled the next morning until the skins of a few, when taken on a spoon and blown upon, would burst.

On Saturday morning, incidentally it was the hottest of the summer, the captain's lieutenants, Wallace and Retlaw, appeared with mattock and shovel, stripped down for action, and we all went to the top of the hill in the pasture behind the house.

Wallace selected a spot near the picnic fireplace and, unperturbed by the blazing sun, began to dig a hole with much more vigor than an ordinary man could have shown with the thermometer at zero.

Soon dead chestnut branches were in a monstrous blaze, and we had a hole that looked big enough to bury a cow. Capt. Yardarm called a halt till the fire should burn down and issued a tot of rum for all hands. The children and I were dispatched to the house to get beans and other ingredients to complete the mystic rites.

Up the hill we toiled carrying the heavy crock, the steaming beans, 2 pounds of pork, molasses, salt, pepper, onions, sugar and catsup, to say nothing of a basket full of cutlery. With great skill the captain cut the pork into uniform slices and began the delicate job of seasoning. Carefully, but with much assurance, he blended, tasted, stirred and mixed until the final sampling brought a look of great satisfaction to his face, and we were given a taste and asked for suggestions. Dorothy said her only idea was to eat them then and there, but the captain ignored this remark and went on with the ritual.

First he put a layer of beans into the pot. Into this he sank three small onions and two pieces of pork. Another layer of beans, more onions and pork and so on until the top was reached and the cover was put on.

By this time the fire had burned down to a fine bed of hot coals, and Wallace shoveled a layer of them into the hole while the captain looked on and nodded approval. Taking care not to fall in, Retlaw gently placed the heavy pot on top of the coals, and at once Wallace began to complete the work of surrounding and covering it with the remains of the hot embers. This done, the captain reverently laid a few ferns on top of the pot, Wallace threw a dozen shovelfuls of dirt on these, and we all went to the brook to cool off.

At sundown, with our paper plates and napkins in the picnic basket, and unknown to the captain, several cans of corned beef hash and a can opener, we went back to the hilltop to see what had happened.

* * * *

I must confess that at that point I wished that I had never seen a bean or a hilltop; because, after the first shovelful of dirt was taken off, a wave of tropical heat poured from the ground, and I couldn't imagine even a bean surviving in that furnace.

Wallace got to the crock at last, and I could also smell the cinders, but refrained from looking at the faces of the others. The cover had a crack clean through it, and I was all for hunting up the can opener, but the captain leaned over, carefully dusted off and removed the cover, and, with spoon in hand, dished out a plate of beans the texture and flavor of which are beyond description. The pork simply melted in my mouth, the onions were succulent and rich, while the beans themselves were cooked to a degree of mellowness that surpassed anything in my experience.

The captain turned to me and said gravely, "This is a bean hole, my dear."

MRS. YARDARM.

Devil's Temptations.

Under the tremendous pressure of responsibility which weighs upon his shoulders, eight years is a long time for a President to be in office.

Not since Grant's day, nearly 70 years ago, has a man entered the White House to stay there eight years without dying or breaking. Cleveland's two terms had a four-year respite between them. Wilson lasted but six years and a half, when he broke and premonitions of the break came in five years when he began to lose his sure footing—and turned egocentric before the election of 1918. Coolidge had a scant six years and surrendered a broken man with the hand of death upon him. Franklin Roosevelt will do well to remember that he has nearly three years before him—troublous, possibly terrible years at best.

He should realize now that of all the temptations the devil dangles before a man whom he takes to the high mountain, the most deadly he offers is the lust to rage and to hold rancor in his heart.

Fair Enough

Jimmy's Success.

I SUPPOSE it is really none of my business, but Mr. Roosevelt's expose of other people's personal affairs in his income tax inquiry has made me very inquisitive about the size and sources of the income of his son and secretary, Lieut. Col. Jimmy Roosevelt, of the United States Marine Corps (Reserve.) Perhaps my love for success stories has something to do with this, for I have read in the remarks of Congressman Treadway, of Massachusetts, that Jimmy's income from his insurance business in Massachusetts was very much greater than you would expect for a young insurance agent.

I think success is a wonderful thing, don't you, especially in the case of a young man making his own way in the world, shunning special privilege and preferment in accordance with the political preaching of a sincere father who is known the whole world over as the friend of the underprivileged, and the very model of ethical behavior, on and off? You remember what the President said about immoral and unethical conduct in his message on income tax evasion, don't you? Boy, did he tell them!

Such a father would never take into the White House as his secretary a son who might be capable of permitting anyone to throw a financial profit his way on account of his relationship to the President of the United States. Especially not after the scornful exposure, early in the New Deal, of the Morgan preferred list whereby many overprivileged Americans of distinguished rank were given an easy profit, because, as the Morgan people wrote, "We wanted you to know we were thinking of you." Remember that? Disgusting, wasn't it?

• • • •

COMING FROM Massachusetts, where Jimmy Roosevelt operated, Congressman Treadway had heard of Jimmy's remarkable success, and, being himself a great admirer of single-handed achievement on merit alone, wanted to see and admire in his income tax returns the record of the young man's conquest. He also wanted to ask Jimmy some questions, to draw him out, as it were, on matters concerning which he might have a natural modesty. In fact, on the occasion of Jimmy's appearance before the Congressional committee Congressman Treadway did ask him some questions, but, as he said in the Congressional Record, "was choked off" by colleagues who may have sympathized with Jimmy's boyish reticence.

Mr. Treadway had heard "reports," as he put it, regarding Jimmy's insurance business, and, although he is a Republican, his motive in asking the questions doubtless was to permit the colonel to refute anything sinister in these "reports."

"Among returns offered to us voluntarily were those of James Roosevelt," Congressman Treadway said for the Record. "I desired to have them examined by an impartial tax expert in order definitely to learn whether reports that have been common in Massachusetts for several years were correct. These reports have come from trustworthy sources showing that Mr. Roosevelt had a very large income from the sale of various kinds of insurance to corporations, the officers of which were anxious to be in the good graces of the Administration.

"While refused this examination by a vote of the committee, I saw enough of them to know that Mr. Roosevelt's income was very much larger than any young insurance agent would ordinarily have in the natural flow of business, such income being derived from insurance premiums and from the earnings of corporations which he organized to carry on the insurance business."

• • • •

IT DOES SEEM a great injustice to all Americans, particularly the young, underprivileged group, to deny them the inspiration to be derived from the story of Jimmy's success, but it is a worse injustice to the young colonel himself for the committee to "choke off" questions and forbid expert, impartial examination of his tax returns which doubtless would have disproved the suggestion, now of record, that he took profits from persons anxious to be in the good graces of the Administration.

Such dealings would involve conduct so unethical in the very family of a President who is hell on other people's ethics that James no doubt will demand an opportunity when Congress meets again to submit himself to questions and his returns to expert, impartial examination. Inexpert examination, by a layman, of the tax documents relating to Jimmy's success can never do the trick, for the papers are said to defy the understanding of the average mind.

I feel confident that Jimmy will give us a tell next session of Congress, not only for the inspiration of the young but for the high ethical offset to the sordid greed of that element whom the President so boldly singled out. Jimmy Roosevelt's ethics, indorsed by the President when he took him into a position of great power in the White House, should be proudly revealed as an example to us all.

Probable Classic

By William Lyon Phelps

The Devil And Webster.

"The Devil and Daniel Webster" is the title of a little book by our American poet, Stephen Vincent Benet, who takes a brief vacation from verse in writing prose. This is a short story so full of interest, so beautifully written, so subtle and profound in its suggestion that I am glad it appears in book form. (Published by Farrar & Rinehart, New York, from the Saturday Evening Post.)

No one can tell whether any contemporary work will live or not; but this charming story has the air of a classic. It looks like an addition to American literature.

• • • •

Its foundation is centuries old; it is the story of a compact with the devil, the most famous example outside of the Bible, being, of course, Faust. But while such a compact, in opera, drama, or novel, may seem romantic, there are a large number of persons who are selling their souls every day, with the hope of gaining some temporary advantage.

The literary style is impeccable; it seems as if every sentence had exactly the right rhythm, as if every word had exactly the right connotation.

• • • •

Whether it contains an undercurrent of applicability to this present year of grace, every reader must decide for himself; but part of my joy in reading it comes from its implied judgment of the character of Daniel Webster. After March 7, 1850, Emerson and the Abolitionists regarded Black Dan as Everett's evil genius, indeed as the Devil himself. And we can see why. They were wrong, but we can understand them better than they understood Webster. For he sacrificed not only his political future and his health, and probably his life, but his inmost convictions about slavery, in order to save the Constitution and the Union, which he had taken an oath to support. No speech in our history was more patriotic.

Mr. Benet has expressed Webster's position in an original and impressive manner, in his last words to the Devil: "I'd go to the pit itself to save the Union!"

Sandlot Bonanza

The revived sandlot baseball diamond has become a factor in big business. American manufacturers now sell five to seven million dollars worth of baseball equipment every year, exclusive of clothing. Ninety-five per cent of this equipment is said to go to amateurs and semiprofessionals. Americans spend about three million a year on balls and about two million on mitts and gloves.

One manufacturer alone uses more than 300 carloads of timber a year in making baseball bats. Players on amateur teams now run into hundreds of thousands. Their activity helps not only manufacturers of sports goods but also makers of uniforms, those who provide lighting for night games and the railroad and bus companies who transport competing teams.

Equally valuable in most ways is the revived interest in amateur football, tennis, golf, swimming, archery and other sports. Public facilities for amateur sports are being increased in many communities, and the popular response is most gratifying to those interested in the physical and social development of America's youth. (Dallas News.)

Spain At Geneva

Valencia Government's Appeal To League Confronts Council Now Assembling; Re-election To Council Opposed.

By C. Poznansky.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

THE APPEAL of the Spanish government to the Council of the League of Nations is a document of paramount importance. It is known that this document denounces the attacks of Spanish merchantmen by Italian air and sea forces and asks that this question be included in the agenda of the September meeting of the Council.

Spain first appealed to the Council denouncing the Italian and German intervention in Spain in December, 1935. A special session of the Council then convened and the question was referred to the nonintervention committee. The matter was discussed a second time at the May meeting. Again the matter was referred to the nonintervention committee, but in this second resolution appeared a reference to Article 10 of the League Covenant and an appeal to the nonintervention committee to "ensure with the utmost speed the withdrawal from the struggle of all non-Spanish combatants participating therein."

This May resolution of the Council made it clear that it was the duty of the League to deal with the matter and that if the efforts of the nonintervention committee failed the Spanish government was entitled to call on the League of Nations for action.

Spain Not Required To Ask For Consideration.

AS A MATTER of fact, the Spanish government was not even required to ask for the insertion of the Spanish question on the agenda. The May resolution did not supersede the first Spanish appeal. In conformity with precedent the appeal had to be placed automatically on the agenda. It is the usual procedure to place on the agenda any question which has not found its ultimate solution, even if it is quite certain that the Council or the Assembly will not deal with it.

Thus the question of the harmonization of the Kellogg Pact and the Covenant has appeared regularly on the agenda of the Assembly since 1931, though everybody knows that it will not be discussed. And in the same way the French and Belgian appeal on the question of the violation of the Locarno Pact by Germany has appeared on all Council agendas since March, 1936.

The usual procedure was not applied in this case. The appeal of the Spanish government did not figure on the provisional agenda distributed to the members of the Council. Technically, it is the secretary general of the League who prepares the provisional agenda, and the acting president of the Council—now the representative of Ecuador—who are responsible for this omission. But one will hardly fail in supposing that this departure from the rules reflects the desire of the great powers not to discuss the Spanish question in the framework of the League of Nations.

The Spanish appeal which forces the council to discuss it is evidence, that the Spanish government no longer desires to co-operate with these powers in an evasion of their responsibilities.

It must be remembered that quiet apart from the possibility to appeal to the public opinion of the civilized world, which the publicity of the League discussions provide, the text of the Covenant speaks in favor of the Spanish government.

Two Appeals Based On Art. 11 Of Covenant.

THE SPANISH appeals, the first as well as the second, are based on Article II of the Covenant. This article says: "Any war, or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the members of the League or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole League, and the League shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations."

On two occasions, in December, 1936, and in May, 1937, the Spanish government agreed to accept a resolution which referred the matter to the nonintervention committee. This appeal to the nonintervention committee became thus the "wise and effectual" action contemplated by the text of the Covenant. But this successful shelving of the question had been possible only because the Spanish government agreed to it. Action under Article II of the Covenant resolution of the council, to be effective, must be unanimous.

It seems hardly possible, now that the nonintervention committee has collapsed, that the Spanish government will agree to further procrastination. Legally the position of the Spanish government is very strong. There can be no doubt that the Italian and German intervention in Spain bears the character of aggression. The Italian press itself no more cares to disguise the facts openly of the fall of Santander as an Italian victory. That means that Spain is legally entitled to ask even for direct action by the members of the League against the aggressor.

Of course, it is known in Valencia as well as in Geneva that no such action will be forthcoming. Nevertheless, the fact that the Spanish government may force the Council to a showdown gives the government a high trump. Apparently, it will try to make the most of it. The Spanish press indicates very clearly that M. Negrin is prepared to fight his battle whole-heartedly. El Socialista says: "We need a big offensive abroad and its center may be in the Geneva meetings."

Prestige Of League Put In Serious Question.

One point is certain: The prestige of the League will be put in greater question by the discussion than it ever was in the Manchurian or even in the Ethiopian affair. It will need a great deal of statesmanship to find a solution which will not wreck what remains of this prestige—one might even say what remains of the League as a peace organization. This consideration gives the Spanish government a chance. Whatever opinion may be held of the sincerity of the attachment of M. Neville Chamberlain to League ideals, it is certain that he cannot risk to appear as the politician responsible for the wreckage of the League. Still more, it seems certain that he would like to appear as a champion of it. Did he not recently accept the honorary presidency of the British League of Nations Union?

A second question affecting Spain is on the agenda not of the Council, but of the Assembly. Spain is seeking re-election to the Council. Normally this re-election was assured by the gentlemen's agreement of 1926. It will be remembered that when Germany entered the League and obtained a permanent seat on the Council three other countries—Brazil, Poland and Spain—also asked for permanent seats, which were refused. Brazil and Spain in protest left the League. Brazil did not come back, but Spain did on the basis of a gentlemen's agreement. This agreement assured so-called semipermanent seats to Poland and Spain; that is, the two countries were to be perpetually re-elected to the Council.

This agreement, however, is not embodied in any document. In consequence, Poland as well as Spain has to ask every three years for re-election, and the re-eligibility must be voted by a two-thirds majority.

There are states which would gladly express their lack of sympathy with the Spanish government by ousting Spain from the Council, and it appers certain that there will be efforts to render the two-thirds majority impossible. The Italian press clearly indicates it.

The success of this maneuver depends on two factors: The first is the attitude of the British government, which will be decisive for many minor states. The second is the attitude of the Latin-American states, which command a considerable number of votes and which thus far in every vote for a Council seat have constituted a bloc.

'World War' Task In Evacuation of Chinese Refugees

Manila, Sept. 5 (AP).—Philippine Red Cross Manager Charles H. Forster predicted tonight China would have a refugee situation "equal in magnitude and horror to the World War."

Forster based his prediction on his recent survey in China and on "developments since I left there."

"If hostilities continue and become more widespread," he added, "one of the gravest instances of mass suffering in history will develop, demanding international relief action."

Boy, 17, Sentenced to Die.

Las Cruces, N. Mex., Sept. 5 (AP).—Delbert Lord, 17, today was sentenced to die in the electric chair November 19, for the abduction slaying of Robert Aubuchon. George Lord, his brother and convicted accomplice, was sentenced to 50 to 60 years at hard labor.

U. S. Cotton

A Statistical Survey

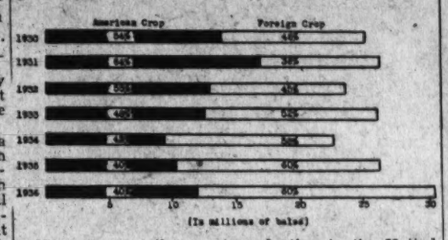
Will It Regain World Supremacy?

UNTIL RECENT years the United States normally produced more than half of the world's cotton. In 1931, a bumper crop year in this country, the United States supplied nearly two-thirds of the total output. Thereafter, because of low prices, drought and artificial restrictions, American production sharply declined until in 1935 and 1936 it amounted to only 40 per cent of the world crop.



With the curtailment of production in the United States, production in other countries began rapidly to increase. In the decade before 1934 the foreign crop usually fluctuated between 10,000,000 and 11,000,000 bales, but in 1936 it reached a "new high" of 18,000,000 bales. The American crop reached its low point of the post-depression period in 1934, and though increasing somewhat in the next two years it remained subnormal and formed a still smaller proportion of the world crop because of increasing production elsewhere.

The crop now maturing in this country gives promise of another bumper yield. The Department of Agriculture has forecast a production of 15,593,000 bales, a figure which has been exceeded only five times in past years. While this large yield may bring the United States appreciably nearer to its former relative position among the producing countries, it has given rise within this country to fears of another huge carry-over and declining prices.

The cotton growers, therefore, have brought pressure to bear on Congress and the Administration for loans to sustain prices, and in return for this privilege their legislative spokesmen are reported to have agreed to support a bill for Government control of crop production when Congress reassembles next winter. With such control in prospect, it is uncertain whether this country will soon regain its former position among the world's producers.

Trailer Wives, Beware!

A Georgia wife on a trailer trip says her husband unhooked it and disappeared.

• • • •

We always thought there must be some reason for the way men have been buying those things.

• • • •

The lady says her bounding bungalow was going along when it suddenly stopped. After a while she wondered what the trouble was and found her husband had uncoupled her and fled.

• • • •

He had, as the personal column ads might put it, "left her bed and trailer."

• • • •

The news caused a panic in the ever growing trailer population. Thousands of wives immediately moved out of the trailer and into the car up ahead with their husbands.

• • • •

The episode has resulted in a demand that the trailer builders equip trailers with some sort of gadget that will release a red light or sound an alarm back in the trailer the minute anybody touches the coupling pin.

• • • •

No woman wants to lose her husband 50 miles from another man.

• • • •

This is one of the big disadvantages of a trailer. In a real house a wife can at least hear him slam the door.

• • • •

The thought of being abandoned away out in the great open spaces is pretty unnerving. It's nice to be close enough to neighbors to run over and relate all the details.

• • • •

When a husband takes a run-out powder 75 miles from the nearest friend, a woman is not only a deserted wife but a lost gypsy.

• • • •

It feels so darned silly when a wife finds herself sitting all alone in one of those mobile huts and realizing that she has not only been abandoned but deprived of all the preliminary arguments.

• • • •

Think of it, girls! Only a squirrel or a chipmonk to talk to and your cries of "Why, the big bum!" ringing in a hollow echo across the great unoccupied spaces! Is there no justice?

Somehow or other it seems funny to think of Franklin Roosevelt getting all hot and bothered over a dispatch, "President Hoover Shelled."

Canadian Dam Held Threat to Old Champlain

Flood Gates on Richelieu Rouse U. S. Residents Despite Experts.

By the Associated Press.

Lake Champlain is an international issue again, 16 decades after Ethan Allen thundered at the doors of Ticonderoga.

Canada and the United States have agreed on sluiceways in the outflowing Richelieu River, which would control the water level of the lake, and some Americans fear the Canadian project constitutes a threat to their darling of the Adirondacks.

Never, they say, shall a foreign though friendly power tamper, with that glacial cradle of robust deed and legend.

It was there tempestuous Benedict Arnold pitted a grim colonial navy against the formidable British flotilla. There Ethan Allen and his "Green Mountain Boys" called on a redcoat garrison to "surrender in the name of the great Johovah and the Continental Congress."

To Control Floods.

There trod the mocassined feet of James Fenimore Cooper's stalwart Uncas, "Last of the Mohicans."

In the War of 1812 the Americans defeated the British there.

In 1887 and again in 1902-1907 and 1914-1915 Canada negotiated in vain with the United States for protection of the shallow Richelieu against seasonal floods of Lake Champlain water. Now a control dam is to be constructed at Freyers Island, just about where the river starts dropping one foot a mile on its course to the St. Lawrence.

Now some Americans are figuratively up in arms because they say the sluiceways will lower the lake level.

Fears Held Unfounded.

"We are making the lake a gift to Canada," railed John B. Burnham, valley resident. But his fears are unfounded, assured the international joint commission in public hearings at St. Albans, Quebec, and at Montreal.

Agriculture, navigation and recreation interests, said Chairman A. C. Stanley of the commission, agree it is very desirable "that the present excessive variation in lake levels of approximately 10 feet should be materially reduced, that floods should be prevented . . . by enlarging the channel capacity of the Richelieu and accelerating its run-off."

The normal lake level, he assured Representative Snell (Republican), of New York, will remain constant.

U.F.W.A. to Open Drive This Week

The C. I. O. drive to enroll Government workers opens this week.

Final instructions will be given organizers of the United Federal Workers of America Wednesday night at the Hamilton Hotel, and they will start their recruiting drive Friday in the Treasury Department.

When the Treasury drive is concluded with a mass rally September 17, the campaign then will be carried into the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Commerce, the Veterans' Administration and to the General Accounting Office in the order named.

Tomorrow at 2 p. m. the U. F. W. A. will give a picnic in Grove 10, Rock Creek Park. A motorcade of automobiles will form at the Washington Monument at 1:30 p. m. and proceed to the park. There will be refreshments, games, contests and oratory.

Merit System Boost Studied By N. F. G. E.

Delegates Averse to Union Affiliation as Conclave Opens in Illinois.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 5.—Extension of the merit system for Government employes will receive the bulk of the attention of the delegates to the twentieth jubilee convention of the National Federation of Government Employes which opens tomorrow morning at the Hotel Abraham Lincoln here for a five-day session. The merit system problem highlights the approximately 460 resolutions submitted by local unions.

Among other demands are extension of classification to the field services; minimum salaries of $1,500 for all full-time adult workers, and corresponding increases for positions requiring greater degrees of skill and experience; establishment of a central personnel agency; creation of a civil service court of appeals; liberalization of present retirement legislation; pay for night work and overtime, and stated promotion intervals.

As the convention prepared to open, federation officials minimized speculation that any attempt would be made to affiliate the Federal group with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Officers also said it was unlikely A. F. of L. affiliation will be attempted. They said it was apparent the federation may seek to divorce itself from any union association.

The federation, of which Luther C. Steward, of Washington, is president, is the largest and oldest organization of Federal employes and the largest group of organized public employes in the Western Hemisphere. Its total membership exceeds 75,000 Federal workers, representing some 2,000 different types of employes. The only branch of the Federal Government not represented in the organization is the Postal Service.

As soon as the convention opens, President Steward will appoint committees, including those on the merit system, classification of Federal employes, retirement, resolutions, credentials, leave and hours, and constitution.

Young Bathers Set Attendance Marks At District Pools

Young Washintgon used the swimming pools in greater numbers than ever before, records of the Playground Department indicated yesterday as the season closed.

Only borderline cases, or projects contingent on court or other decisions, remain for allocation, he said.

Meet Mr. Droste

Walter H. Droste, formerly comptroller of the Farm Credit Administration of St. Louis, comes to Washington as assistant to the deputy governor of the FCA. He is a graduate of Washington University, St. Louis, and entered the field of public accounting in 1919, spending a year as an accountant with the Audit & Bond Co., St. Louis, before going with the Federal Land Bank in 1921. There he was successively employed as cashier, auditor, assistant treasurer, and since 1933 comptroller of the St. Louis FCA.

Concentrated Effort

A change of working strategy has been decided upon by the District Organizing Committee of the U. F. W. A. Heretofore its energies were directed at all Federal employes—now it will concentrate on individual departments. The first shot is at the Treasury Department.

A force of 100 volunteer organizers will launch the Treasury drive today. The corps will be subdivided and a squad of workers will be assigned to each Treasury division. The workers will distribute literature, hold meetings, sponsor social events and make individual contacts. At the close of the week, the drive will culminate in a rally of Treasury employes.

The campaign followed in the Treasury will be applied week by week to every Government agency in Washington. And when the task is completed here, the same sort of drive will be undertaken in other cities where there are large bodies of Federal workers. The campaign here concludes a long period of preliminary organization work.

The Men's Bowling League of the Farm Credit Administration is expected to be off to a flying start September 20. Ten teams have applied for charters. The League officers and committeemen are: President, D. A. Right; vice president, H. H. Hendricks; secretary-treasurer-official scorer, H. B. Vincent, jr.; board of directors, D. A. Right, chairman; T. F. Wilson, jr., W. E. Allen, H. H. Hendricks, Stanley O'Donnell, W. H. Balderson, H. J. Swink, T. L. Piper, R. E. Kaufmann, Roy Norris; executive committee, D. A. Right, chairman; J. A. Jordan, T. F. Wilson, jr., A. T. Terwisse; committee on prizes and schedules, H. B. Vincent, chairman; Stanley O'Donnell and J. A. Fowler.

Cooler

Some time ago, one of the workers in Interior's new building came to us with complaint that the lobby was unendurably hot. The complaint was duly printed. A few days thereafter, someone else from Interior came in to defend the lobby, declaring that the temperature was fine and wondering why anyone should object to it. Sanitary Experts Gather Tuesday

The American Society of Sanitary Engineers will open its thirty-second convention at Hotel Mayflower Tuesday.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, will speak at the Wednesday session. "Plumbing and Public Health" will be discussed by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer. A. R. McGonegal, sanitary officer of the District, is chairman of the convention committee.

Sanitation for automobile trailers, which is a live problem in most municipalities and cities at the present time, will be discussed. The session will close Friday.

Mrs. Marguerite Adams Is Wed to George Tyson

Mrs. George Mesta, of Washington, Is Matron of Honor as Sister Is Married to Boston Broker at Newport.

Of interest to Washington society—and also somewhat to its surprise—was the wedding on Saturday of Mrs. Marguerite Skirvin Adams to George Tyson, Boston broker. The ceremony took place at Beach Mount, summer home of the bride at Newport, R. I., and was attended only by members of the families. The Rev. Harry Fulton Cost, of the First Presbyterian Church officiated.

The bride, who wore a tight-fitting gown of soft crepe, had as her matron of honor her sister, Mrs. George Mesta. Her daughter, Miss Betty Adams, was flower girl.

The couple left immediately after a wedding breakfast to sail for Europe, where they will remain two months. On their return they will reside at 1 Louisburg Square, on historic Beacon Hill, in Boston.

Mrs. Adams is the daughter of William B. Skirvin, of Oklahoma City, who gave his daughter in marriage. The family is prominently known in that city and a hotel bears their name. Mrs. Mesta came to Washington to reside shortly after the war and as Miss Marguerite Skirvin, her sister visited her here frequently.

The bridegroom is a cousin of the Very Rev. James De Wolf Perry, D. D., presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Tyson is a son of the late George Tyson, one time president of the Burlington & Missouri Railroad. He is a member of the brokerage firm of Townsend, Anthony & Tyson, of Boston and New York. His brother, Russell Tyson, served as best man at the wedding.

Sylvan Theater Ends Tomorrow

Mrs. Blair Bannister Heads Guest List for Finale.

Mrs. Blair Bannister, Assistant United States Treasurer and sister of Senator Carter Glass, heads the list of special guests for the final summer festival of the season tomorrow evening at 8:15 at the National Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds. The Tempo Choral Society will offer a program of spirituals and other folk music under the joint auspices of the Community Center Department and the office of National Capital Parks.

Members of the Board of Education will attend this final event as guests of the summer festival committee; and outstanding musicians of the Capital also will be present tomorrow night—unless inclement weather should cause postponement to Wednesday at the same hour.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, chairman of the summer festivals, assisted by Mrs. John Albert Hunter and Mrs. Vera Robertshaw, will greet the guests tomorrow evening, and the ushers committee will comprise William P. Kilgore, William Austin Davis, Kent Dyer and Chester Ring.

A group of members of the Girl Reserves Glee Club also will assist as ushers and program girls for this closing musical event of the summer festival season here.

Sorority Leaders To Be Entertained

Mrs. Rene Reixach, president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha, will entertain the executive committee Wednesday evening at her home in Chevy Chase.

The program for the coming year will be completed and plans made for the first event, a membership tea to be held on September 19 at the home of Miss Adelaide Woodley.

Among those expected to attend are Mrs. Eugene Seitz, Mrs. Franklin Steinko, Mrs. Albert Goergens, Mrs. Richard Gorsline, Mrs. Walter Densmore, Mrs. Laurie Hess Mrs. Lindell Leathers, Mrs. John Warlick, Miss Frances Fauntleroy, Miss Adelaide Woodley, Miss Beatrice Clephane, Miss Dorothy Rock, Miss Esther Arneson and Miss Mary Elizabeth McGehee.

Arbitration Is Labor's Best Bet, Mrs. Becker, D.A.R. Head, Holds

Country Opposed to 'Acts of Trespass and Violence in Defiance of Law,' Holiday Statement Contends.

ORGANIZED LABOR'S greatest gains have been made through arbitration and collective bargaining, Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R., declared today in a Labor Day statement.

The American people, she said, are opposed to terrorist and law-breaking tactics on the part of strikers.

Mrs. Becker warned the ranks of labor must be purged of communistic agitators. The "sit-down" strike, she said, should have no part in labor controversies in this country.

In a statement issued to all chapters of the patriotic organization, Mrs. Becker said:

"The attention of all Americans who have their country's welfare at heart is focused this Labor Day on the present lawless trend of many so-called industrial disputes.

'Any leadership which shows a growing tendency for the disregard of law and property rights and which seeks to enforce demands by committing acts of trespass and violence in defiance of law and order is certainly ill-advised, and such leadership cannot possibly secure the support of public opinion, which is so necessary to the successful termination of any dispute of national interest.

Labor Disputes Foremost Today

"I believe I can say without fear of contradiction that labor disputes in this country are foremost in the thoughts of the American people because they have actually become directly or indirectly a factor in the life of nearly every citizen.

"There also appears to be a disposition upon the part of some public officials, whose sworn duty it is to uphold and enforce the law, to permit seizures of industrial property through sit-down strikes, strong-arm picketing and mob rule.

"The Daughters of the American Revolution have always supported labor in its orderly march toward higher standard of wages and working conditions. It has commended the principles of the American Federation of Labor, particularly the fight of that organization to purge labor's ranks of Communists and radical agitators.

"The D. A. R. supports the stand of labor leaders who have opposed the so-called 'sit-down' strike as an illegal weapon. This European importation should have no part in labor controversies in the United States.

"There is the serious matter of law-breaking in seizing property by means of the 'sit-down' and holding it by sheer force of numbers. Interference with United States mails and threats of bodily harm hurled at peaceful citizens, we believe, will not win public sympathy for labor.

"Organized labor's gains in this country, where working standards are high, have been made through orderly procedure and not by the bludgeon.

Other Ways Than by "War"

"The principle of collective bargaining has been universally upheld and wage and hour agreements between employer and employe can be worked out fairly under the elaborate machinery now provided by the Federal Government.

"We have all read of intimidation, coercion, and strong-arm methods being used in recent strikes, but I do not feel such methods are in favor with the rank and file of American labor. Sincere American leadership realizes that such methods create nothing but adverse public sentiment, and in the final analysis no large permanent gain can be made on any such basis.

"Labor in the coming 12 months can win the respect of the people by ridding its ranks of agitators who seek to tear down and destroy not only American industries, but the American form of government.

"The country has been coming out of the worst depression in its history. It appears that the natural scene is set for a great revival of industry, which in turn would soon eradicate unemployment and put the whole country back on a prosperous basis.

"Both leaders of labor and employers of labor should sit down as man to man and make every possible effort to adjust such differences as arise between them, so that the suffering which is caused always by unemployment will be lessened to the utmost."

Duluth Girl Wed Here to Nevadan

Miss Florence A. Harnell Bride of F. D. Bradley.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harnell, of Duluth, Minn., announce the marriage of their daughter, Florence Agnes Harnell to Francis Dean Bradley, son of Mrs. Dean Bradley, of Carson City, Nev. The ceremony took place here in Washington Saturday, August 28, at the Calvary Methodist Church, with the Rev. Frank Steelman officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dean Bradley are now on a wedding trip in the South, and will return to the Corcoran Courts Apartment after Labor Day.

Mrs. Coy E. Strickland, sister of the bride, served as her matron of honor, while Miss Eva Linnander, of Duluth, Minn., was her bridesmaid.

Coy E. Strickland, brother-in-law of the bride, acted as best man, and the ushers were Rudolph Turrentine, of Houston, Tex.; Cecil Shea and Harold Smith.

The bride is a graduate of the State Teachers College, Duluth. The bridegroom was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1934.

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon

Statistics prove that more people get married in October than any other month, although June seems to have a corner on most of the sentimental publicity.

One of the most important scheduled for the Capital next month is that of Mary Cowles, who will say "I do" to Willard (Jess) Reed on October 16—Saturday—at St. John's Church on Sixteenth street. The ceremony will be followed by a large reception at the 1925 F street club. Mary is at present on the high seas Baltimore bound from a three months holiday in Europe, and will be met at the pier by her fiance. She will stop in Washington only long enough to dump her luggage at her 3226 N street apartment, and will then be off to spend the week-end with the parents of Mr. Reed.

Mary will have her sister, Virginia Cowles, as her maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Phyllis Thompson and Betty Hardie, with whom she makes her home here, and yours truly. The ushers are not yet announced.

Mary will have her sister, Virginia Cowles, the well-known writer, as her maid of honor, and her bridesmaids will include Phyllis Thompson and Betty Hardie, with whom she makes her home here, and yours truly. The ushers are not yet announced..

The daughter of Dr. Edward Cowles, of New York, and of the late Mrs. Jacquith Cowles, of Boston, Mary was for a time the step-granddaughter of Senator McAdoo, as her father was married to the former Nora McAdoo before she became Mrs. Francis Taylor. Jess is the son of the president of Browne and Nichols School in Cambridge, Mass.

Mary having made many friends since she took up residence in Washington several years ago, her wedding is sure to be preceded by a flurry of parties.

Virginia Cowles—known as "Didda"—will follow Mary back to this country in a week or two. When last heard from she was in Santander, Spain, writing articles about the war.

John Roosevelt, alleged flower-tosser and champagne-squirter, is a passenger on the French liner Paris which is due to tie up at her New York pier on Wednesday from Havre and Southampton.

Also on board are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who are returning to their home Merrywood near McLean, Va., after a month in Europe. They visited Paris and went to Scotland for the grouse shooting. Mrs. Auchincloss spent the early part of the summer cruising off the New England coast on her yacht Bonita.

Mme. Pierre Benech, wife of the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and her children are others among the passengers.

They are returning after a vacation and will move to Georgetown, where they have leased a house belonging to Miss Margaret Frazer.

This is the time of year when postcards of the "having wonderful time" or "cross marks my room" variety reach their peak. These colored pictures of enticing sands and cobalt blue waters are great breeders of discontent, especially in offices where the temperature hovers around the hundreds.

However, we were glad to hear from Sibilla Sidlesky, who dropped us a card from Venice. At least it didn't show a beach, but a reproduction of one of Titian's great paintings. Since Sibilla is a promising art critic, and has made many studies in this field, it can be surmised that she is right in her element.

"Greetings from Italy, where reality is better than all dreams" reads the message. "See you back in U. S. A. in the fall."

Miss Skidelsky is the daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister, and has been in Paris and Italy for most of the summer.

Calendar Covers Social Events

Montgomery Council System Avoids Meetings Congestion.

The Montgomery Council of Social Welfare, to avoid having all the meetings on one night, several horseshows and field trials on a single Saturday, or various meetings of women's organizations holding forth on the same afternoon, has introduced an innovation in county planning. A master calendar showing coming events of interest to county residents will be posted at the Old Courthouse in Rockville. Most of the county organizations already have posted their regular meetings and plan to consult the master calendar before setting the dates of annual or special meetings.

"The judgment of a Solomon must be exercised by county citizens who are interested in county, civic and social affairs," said Dr. V. L. Ellicott, council chairman. "To attend two or three meetings at the same hour in different parts of the county is obviously impossible. Our council hopes by maintaining a clearing house for events to prevent duplication of dates and give members and guests the opportunity of planning ahead to secure better attendance at meetings."

Secretaries who wish to post organization dates and individuals who desire to consult the calendar may call the council office and ask for the calendar secretary. Communications should be addressed to the Montgomery County Calendar of Events, Old Courthouse, Rockville. The schedule of coming events follows:

September 7. Silver Spring Lions Club, Bethesda Rotary Club.
9. Rockville Rotary Club.
10. Pentalpha Lodge, Gaithersburg.
13. Montgomery County Civic Federation.
14. Bethesda Rotary Club, Silver Spring D. A. R., Montgomery County Quota Club.
15. Neighborhood Garden Club, Gaithersburg.
16. Gaithersburg Women's Club, Rockville Rotary Club.
17. Montgomery County Council on Social Welfare, Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Volunteer Fire Department, Pentalpha Chapter, No. 38, Eastern Star, Gaithersburg.
21. Silver Spring Lions Club, Bethesda Rotary Club, Dickerson Round Table, Col. Tench Tilghman Chapter, D. A. R., Bethesda.
22. Kensington Chamber of Commerce.
23. Rockville Rotary Club.
27. Pentalpha Lodge, Gaithersburg.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

One Wife Seconds J. F. D. in Asking 'What Price Chastity?'; Another Has 'No Regrets.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: At least J. F. D. has found championship in her contention in a letter to this column of August 27 that the old standards of morality and chastity don't work for the modern girl. Of the vast number of letters of comment received on J. F. D.'s communication, the overwhelming majority disagree with her theory that girls who adhere to the straight and narrow path are left at home waiting while those who relinquish their ideals make the best marriages. However, there are presented today some letters typical of the viewpoint of those who admit that J. F. D. has a side to her argument.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I, as a married woman, make a few remarks on the letter of J. F. D.? It interested me greatly because her problem and home is an exact duplicate of mine several years ago. I clung to my ideals of morality, virginity and chastity, which had been taught me by a fanatically religious mother, while all around me many of the girls I was associated with were promiscuous in their pre-marital relations. As time passed I lost track of a majority of these girls, but two of them are in our married circle—they are very happily married and are adored by their husbands, who were just "one of the boys" and were aware of the fact.

* * * *

I do not say my husband does not love me after a fashion, but his attitude toward me certainly does not compare with that of the two husbands mentioned toward their wives, and these wives havn't put as much into their married life as I have. As a result, the letters to your column of J. M. G., John R. and Paul make me chuckle. My one consolation is that I am successful in creating the illusion that my husband and I are the ideally married couple.

* * * *

I offer no advice to J. F. D. because whatever she does she will regret. At 29, I only wish I had my life to live over again. Sign me as,

LIFE WILL CONTINUE REGARDLESS.

Has No Regrets.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Orchids to J. F. D., whose letter appeared in your column of August 27. I agree with everything she wrote except her statement that most husbands and wives were not true to each other. I've been married happily for ten years and I've never in that time had the slightest desire to be unfaithful to my husband, nor has he to me. I expect to feel the same way 20 years hence.

* * * *

Due to financial reasons we went together five years before we could marry, and naturally (I say naturally, for I believe it's natural and normal), our love was consummated before marriage. And I certainly don't feel that our standards were anything but noble. We loved each other, and the love of a man and a woman, you must admit, is—has to be—much more than spiritual to keep it alive. It's at least 50 per cent physical.

* * * *

An intelligent girl can decide after a number of dates with the same man just how she feels toward him in this respect. She can tell instinctively if the man is sincere, and if she really loves him. I don't believe there's much to lose even if they never marry. I don't call that a "broad-minded view." I merely call it sensible.

* * * *

I've seen too many girls like J. F. D. grow into bitter frustrated spinsters either through fear or the hide-bound teachings of well-meaning but ignorant parents. I can't say I blame her for feeling cynical and I sincerely hope either she herself or some of your readers can help her find an answer that will bring her happiness and peace of mind. I wonder if she has read "Tomorrow Is Ours," by Louise R. Peattie, in the September Red Book. It's a novel that contains, to my way of thinking, all the arguments for and against this thing they call "moral chastity."

A WELL WISHER.

Condemps Hypocrisy.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I agree with J. F. D. We generally follow the examples of our parents without being able to give a really good reason therefor. This applies to our moral as well as our political and religious views.

* * *

I read Margaret Culkin Banning's "The Case For Chastity," and found it highly amusing in that it is just about as inconsistent as anything that has ever been published. She advises children against doing the very things that their parents are doing. If we can believe what we hear and read, most married people practice birth control, which is nothing but legalized immorality. Some women have abortions performed and so long as they are joined in the so-called bands of holy matrimony, no stigma is attached to the crime. In other words, as I see the situation, so long as things are done under cover and in a sneaking and "scientific" way, no stamp of disgrace is placed on wickedness of any kind.

* * * *

It does not make for one's popularity to speak too plainly of these matters. Nice people don't tell the whole truth. Still the subjects mentioned are printed boldly in the so-called best magazines, yet we talk of the loose morals of young boys and girls. After all it would be the height of folly to say that everyone should adhere to the same standard of living since people are as different as day and night. It is little wonder that youth is confused and bewildered, not knowing what is right. JANE.

Says Girls Run 'Wild.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a happy wife and have been for two years. But I think J. F. D. is right in her statements about many girls. I went to a private school here and went with the usual run of college boys who try to rush the girls off their feet. They come here to get an education, then go back home and settle down and marry the home town sweetheart, but what they want here they usually get because there are plenty of little fools who will give in to them.

* * * *

As J. F. D. says, virginity seems to be a thing of the past. I have worked in a place where only women were employed and was horrified at the conversations of these girls about what took place on their time off. They thought nothing of talking of the affairs they had with married men. The trouble in Washington is that too many women make too much, also that so many girls who come here to work are loose because they have no parents here to correct them.

* * * *

My advice to J. F. D. is to live a happy, clean life and the right man will find you in the end. No half loaf is as good as the whole one and don't let them fool you.

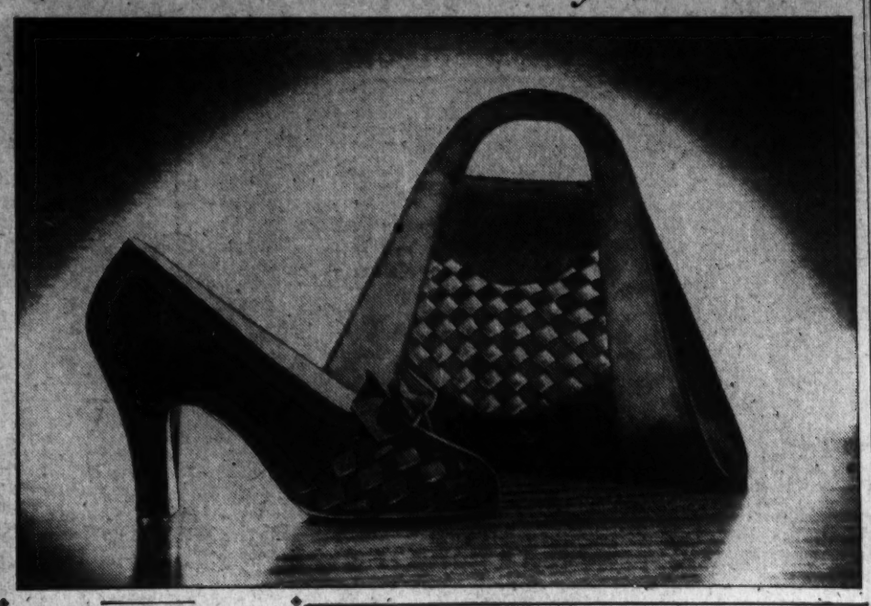
A HAPPY FRAU.

Tomorrow's Letters

Girls who have "had their fling" will reply tomorrow to the question raised in this column by J. F. D., 22-year-old Washington teacher, as to whether it paid the modern girl to live by conventional standards. Of the vast amount of mail on this subject, two especially interesting letters have been selected for publication.

Match Your Accessories in New and Unusual Ways This Fall

The all-black costume below, combining shiny and dull fabrics, uses the monotone idea; shoes, gloves, hat and bag, are of black suede. Gold clips and bracelets furnish the only color. For an interesting change, the chic bag and shoes (right) of suede with grosgrain ribbon in a distinctive blocked design, in wine, green, or rust, would give this frock an entirely different appearance. This same bag-shoe duet in black could effectively contrast a bright frock of silk or wool.



Newest Modes Lay Emphasis On Accessories

Black Leads Color Parade, Although Bright Tones Appear, Too.

By Ethel Ehlen
The Post Fashion Editor.

CLOTHES make the woman—accessories make the costume! In this season when luxury, elegance, femininity and individuality are of paramount importance, accessoreis are in the style spotlight. The old idea of the basic frock or suit and numerous accessory changes to give the illusion of a more extensive wardrobe, is appearing in many new and interesting guises. With black leading the color parade throughout the wardrobe and bright accents sponsored by leading designers on both sides of the Atlantic, the ingenious woman has a wonderful change this fall to plan outstanding costumes.

There is no hard and fast rule for matching accessories for autumn smartness. You can plan to have your hat and shoes, gloves and bag, shoes and bag, hat and belt, in matching color and material; or, any other arrangement that offsets the background (the costume) to best advantage. The main consideration is pleasing harmony or contrast in color tones and fabric, with an eye toward originality and becomingness. Use some imagination in your ensembling and don't be afraid to try new and unusual combinations of color and fabric. This is a season of dash and glamour and every fastidious woman should take advantage of the trend.

Versatile Accents for Chic.

With short hemlines an important fashion feature, shoes are an integral part of every costume; they are coming in for more attention than ever before; consequently should be chosen with great care. An all-black frock, for instance, may be accented by shoes of dark green, wine, rust, or one of the very swank multicolored versions. This color contrast then may be picked up by gloves, hat, belt or handbag of the same color tone and styling; or, it may be planned to match all of these accents with shoes and alternate the arrangement for effective change, at intervals, to give the frock a look of newness. Some designers advocate a bit of color all in one spot in the ensemble; for example, gloves matching bag; hat echoing the scarf tint.

Black is not the only color which is being sponsored as a smart foil for tinted accessories. Any of the popular costume hues and tints, for fall and winter may be dramatized by contrasting accents. Green with brown accessories; gray with black, rust, wine or blue; navy with rust or deep green; natural with black or bright color; wine or rust with black, navy or green accessories—all these are smart. As a third color tone and contrast, costume jewelry is suggested by stylists. Gold or silver-colored metal, in massive ad antique-looking pieces, interpreted in clips, pins, bracelets and odd necklaces, give an otherwise casual costume, a look of richness and distinction. Shiny and dull fabrics also merge to produce smart effects; as a frock of satin with suede accessories, or one of dull crepe with shiny accents, which may be either the same color or a contrasting color tone.

Seven New Colors For Women's Shoes

Ten Shades Are Adopted by Joint Committee.

Ten colors for women's shoes, consisting of seven new and three repeated shades, have been adopted for spring of 1938 by the joint committee of tanners, shoe manufacturers and retailers in co-operation with the Textile Color Card Association.

The seven new colors comprise:

Parisian blue—A bright medium blue of decided purplish cast, harmonizing closely with the violet or purplish blues in the sapphire and cornflower gamme, so important here and in Paris.

Redbark—A very new interpretation of a reddish "earth" tone in the acajou-cedar range.

Brownspice—A lively spicy brown of the ginger type.

India brown—A basic volume brown, lighter and warmer than the current coffee brown.

Chateau wine—A new spring rendition of the oxblood or vintage family.

Tuxedo green—A smart neutral green for sports or swagger wear, lighter than Araby green.

Bisquette—A light biscuit tone, to be used especially in ombre effects with India brown, brownspice and other shades.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Familiar Quotations.

"Another thing, it's been especially hard on me to be poor, because I DO love nice things. I've always been that way. I simply can't stand cheap things. Bill says the trouble with me is I ought to have married a millionaire."

BRAVE BESSIE.

"I'm certainly glad she got the job and I hope she makes good in it, but—well, you know what I've about decided? I've decided that the trouble with me is I'm not a pusher. I don't know how to promote myself. That's all it takes to get along. From now on, I'm going to get right out and sell myself."

HUMBLE HATTIE.

"Now I'm just going to tell you the truth—maybe you won't like it, but if there's one thing about me I won't lie, especially not to my friends. I DON'T like that haircut."

FRIENDLY FANNIE.

"I NEVER have any clothes."

RAGGED ROSY.

". . . and I just said to him, 'If she stays another week in this house, I go.' If I do say it myself—I'm the easiest person in the world to get along with. If anybody can't get along with me, it's their fault."

ADAPTABLE ADDIE.

"If there's anything in the world I pride myself on, it's being broad-minded, but when a woman goes after MY husband——"

COSMOPOLITAN CLARA.

'Oh. No, no, you take this seat . . . no, really, I don't mind a bit sitting on the grass, I'm just as limber as a cat. No, now please I'd feel perfectly terrible to let anybody older——"

POLITE POLLY.

"Well I don't care what anybody says—I bet she's a lot older than that. I know one thing for certain—she's a lot older than me."

JUVENILE JENNY.

"How interesting! . . . How terribly interesting, Mr. Speel! . . . Now isn't that interesting . . . Can you IMAGINE that! . . . How horribly interesting! . . . Why, Mister S-P-E-E-L!"

CHARMING CYNTHIA.

"I tell you I don't care anything about the man. I just let him hang around because I feel sorry for him."

GENEROUS GERTIE.

"You don't like this picture! Well, I don't see why not. It's the very image of you. Look at that mouth! And that nose! After all, you don't want a picture to flatter you."

TACTFUL TILLIE.

"Yes, I like Washington fine—only—well I get so TERRIBLY lonely."

VAMPING VIRGIE.

"No, I don't believe in gossip. You know me. I always 'tend to my own business. But this is the way I look at it—I really think Ethel ought to know about Bill. I think somebody ought to just go to her and tell her in a nice way——"

LEND-A-HAND LETTY.

"O-O-H! I made the most awful break in front of all those men! I wonder what on EARTH they'll think."

INNOCENT INA.

"How are you feeling now? . . . Sure you're not working too hard? Oh, nothing; only I thought you looked a little tired . . . Oh, say, did you hear Eve was getting married? That makes you the last one in the crowd that's still single. Say, if you don't watch out you'll be an old maid . . . goodbye . . . now don't work too hard.

KINDLY KATE.

"I never was so insulted in ALL my life. And I hadn't DONE a thing. I can't see what makes men so fresh. And why do they always make passes at me? They don't seem to bother other girls."

DEFENSELESS DOROTHY.

"The whole thing in dealing with men is—you got to be bold. No, I don't care what you say, they don't appreciate the other kind. No, I tell you a man always marries the woman who runs after him."

WISE WINNIE.

"Aren't women silly!"

SUPERIOR SADIE.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Logan Clendening, M. D.

Chemicals in Diet

I SUPPOSE you all have one on your list—one of those friends who eats only one kind of chemical at each meal—either carbohydrate or protein—never mixed. It does not seem to do them any harm, and for a while it makes them happy, which is a good deal better than the way they used to look before they went on the diet, if only they wouldn't act so superior and pitiful toward the rest of us.

Because, of course, they are not right about it. More evidence is accumulating on this line all the time. The latest refutation is by Dr. Eugene Foldes, now of New York, formerly assistant professor of medicine at the University of Budapest.

The theory on which all this nonsense about the antagonisms of carbohydrate and protein digestion is based is that the digestion of carbohydrates or starches begins in the alkaline medium of the mouth, and after a short interruption in the stomach on account of the presence of the acid gastric juice, continues undisturbed in the small intestine.

This occurs, however, only if the carbohydrate food is eaten alone. If such protein foods as meat, fish or eggs are added to carbohydrates, the acid of the gastric juice is increased by their presence, digestion in the stomach is delayed and carbohydrate digestion in the stomach is delayed so that fermentation results.

Not one of the statements, according to Dr. Foldes, will stand the test of examination. The action of saliva in the mouth does not play a very large part in starch digestion. Strauss has shown that even when there is entire absence of the salivary secretion there is no disturbance of starch digestion. There is no evidence whatever to show that if starches are eaten there is any difference in the amount of secretion of gastric juice.

Furthermore, the acid of the gastric juice helps break up starches and prepare them for intestinal digestion. Fermentation is not caused by undigested starch but by bacteria. And the bacteria which would cause fermentation in the upper part of the intestines are destroyed by the hydrochloric acid of the stomach. If that isn't stimulated to secretion fermentation might really result.

"Let your mind alone," is James Thurber's answer to all the new-fangled phychology. "Let your digestion alone," is the answer to such fads as this.

"That's the way the bear wore it," was the answer the old man made to those who advised him to turn the fur of his bear laprobe toward his body. "That's the way nature made it," is the answer to trying to change the digestive system.

"But why do these people get benefit out of it if it's no good?" is the question that always comes up. My friends, if this same group were to have explained to them with equal plausibility and fervor the idea that all their ills would vanish if they ate nothing but kangaroo tail soup, they would get just as much benefit.

Costumes Starting As Suits Finish Day As Evening Gowns

Paris, (U.P.)—You may be a "strip-tease artist" in a modified form before the winter is over, for Paris designers have introduced the removal of clothing piece by piece as a means of making costumes serve for several occasions.

You may start out for the day in a tailored suit and come home in a dress or wear a cocktail costume early in the evening and later turn it into an evening gown simply by the removal of a jacket or over-blouse.

Double-skirted evening gowns become afternoon frocks by ripping off the lower flounce of the skirt leaving the upper skirt of daytime length.

A long-sleeved cocktail or evening dress with a full-length skirt can be transformed into an afternoon dress by removing the outer skirt to reveal a short one beneath and, reversing the process, another house changes a cocktail suit into an evening costume. Made with a long-sleeved bolero jacket, when that is removed a short-sleeved blouse gives a dressier touch to the costume—but that also peels off and a low-cut evening gown comes forth.

Many blouses use a modified version of the "stripping" by making severely tailored cocktail dresses into evening gowns by the simple process of removing the jacket.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 5.

THE MOST astonishing number of insect plagues have descended upon us this summer, and I don't mean the conventional picnic ants. If a sandstone borer should turn up, it would simply mean that the metropolis was near its end, and that Radio City would soon be a large pile of dust!

ALICE HUGHES.

I have already mentioned how the Japanese Beetles have eaten the penthouse putting greens and sweet corn. Then, a few days ago, the great Borough of the Bronx was shuddering over the onslaught of what the bug experts thought might be book lice. At any rate, the little critters became so bad that 58 families were ordered to leave a new $350,000 apartment building—and were they sore! These insects not only invaded the food, but actually bit children. They are said to come from unseasoned wood, and to possess almost supernatural power to make folks unhappy.

With the Bronx quieting down, the parks and even our back yards are in a state of siege, the new offenders being web-worms. These dumb chums attack trees, especially the Ailanthus, which seems to thrive best in cities, but the web-worms are not above a good meal on grass when it offers. The great city of New York considers the web-worm, a major menace.

* * * *

Now all this is a very strange thing to an old New Yorker. Worms and bugs we have always had in plenty, erect upon two legs. But this invasion of multipedal vermin of threatening demeanor is absolutely new. Perhaps, indeed, it is the Beginning of the End.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, movie dream man of 20 years ago, and his lovely British wife, the former Lady Ashley, burst into town a few days ago. Doug had to tell the reporters something, so he said he thought he'd like to make a movie on the historic settling of the Midwest. Well, I've thought of every movie actor living, from Mickey Rooney to George Arliss, and I can't think of one less suited to a Midwest epic than dear old Douggie. But one simply must speak to the press!

* * * *

One of the Fifth Avenue superstores has thought up a cutie, though obvious. They have appointed five college boys to sit in judgment on college girl fashions this fall, the head of the board being Don O'Connell, Columbia '37, now doing post-graduate work there. The idea being, naturally, that campus dolls dress for men and not other girls—a debatable thought. Dorothy Cox thought this up, and we should give her a cum laude, I suppose. Try and trade that for a new hat on the avenue.

* * * *

A certain sign of fall is to be found in the fact that the lovely Morgan sisters, Gloria Vanderbilt and Lady Furness, creep back into the public eye and print. Just now there is a great wave of admiration for Lady Furness because it is a well-known fact that the Duke of—is it—Windsor, was madly in love with her for several years before she presented to him the Baltimore lady, who is his present wife. And since the royal (?) marriage she has behaved with the utmost discretion, chasing the press from here to there if they asked off-side questions . . .

Elsa Maxwell's long-awaited memoirs will appear serially in one of the fashion monthly magazines. Of course I, for one, can wait, but that is unusual.

"Form Divine" is the new name thought up by our Sara Pennoyer for the current figure—long legs, tiny waist, uplifted bosom and so on. Eight mannequins of this type paraded before us the other day. So if you are faced with the "form divine" threat, you know what to expect!

Write Charming Letters

NOW you know why Eve keeps her friends—no matter how far they stray. In a jiffy she can dash off a delightful note, strengthen a friendship tie.

You try, too, but oh! how hard it is! You can't even start! For who wants to hear "Iv'e been so busy lately," which is the only beginning you can think of?

Take courage. Letter writing is easy when you know a few of the rules. And if you relax, pretend you're just talking, a good start pops up smartly.

You might begin:

"This morning I vowed I'd write to you today and here—after bribing the youngsters with promises of ice cream—I am!"

Or—"Mary told me you'd won the garden prize in your town. We're proud of you!"

Or—"Are you forgetting us? Your old friends think it's about time you drove over."

Perhaps it's the note to new friends that sets you pen chewing! They may be so critical—of your stationery—of your grammar!

You have nothing to fear if you stick to white, cream, light-blue or gray for your stationery. And checking over your letters with a list of common errors helps you to keep down such breaks as "those kind" for "that kind," "awful glad" for "awfully glad."

Our 40-page booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," gives you helpful tips and samples—easy to follow for friendly letters, invitations, thank you and sympathy notes, business letters and many more. Gives English errors to avoid and correct etiquette for formal and informal letters.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Oil Keeps Skin Smooth, Relaxation Cares for the Nerves.

By Ida Jean Kain.

FORMULA for youth: Oil to keep your skin smooth, and relaxation to keep your nerves unkinked.

Maybe you work too hard at staying young. Learn to take it easy and "do nothing" for beauty some part of every day. Even in the beauty shops these days relaxation is an important part of the treatment.

For most of us, relaxing is harder than work, and this is particularly true of career women. However, we are beginning to appreciate the importance of regular relaxation. The actress whose career depends upon youth has learned the art of relaxing, and the business woman is learning that relaxation is necessary to efficiency.

To begin with, very few of us know how to relax. It takes practice. You may need relaxing exercises to help unite the kinks in your nerves. You can take any set of exercises and make them serve as relaxers, if you do them correctly. The following, however, are especially adapted to the highly strung, nervous people. Take these exercises as if your arms and legs were on hinges—as if you were as floppy as a rag doll:

Let Yourself Go.

Let yourself go with this exercise:

Standing with one foot slightly ahead of the other, stretch the arms overhead. Inhale, and increase the upward stretch of first one arms and then the other. Now, exhale, and relax all over, letting the arms drop, the knees sag, and the spine go loose. Do the exercise three times to take away all tension.

Go loose-jointed and limber with this bobbing exercise:

Stand with feet wide apart and let the trunk flop forward limply, arms dangling and head hanging. Shrug the tension out of your shoulders; now come to a standing position and, without interrupting the movement, go down again. Let the top of your body bob up and down effortlessly. This exercise relieves all tension from the back and shoulders.

Here is a spine flexor that unites all the nerves from the base of the neck down:

Position: Kneeling on the floor with feet under the hips, legs straight back under body, arms down at sides.

Movement: Bring the arms up overhead and move the trunk forward, unfolding at the knees and sliding the arms forward on the floor. Fold again, and as you sit back on the feet, stretch the upper part of the back. Do this exercise with all the laziness that is in your.

For a perfect relaxation and beauty program, follow the exercises with a half-hour of rest. Lie down in a dark, quiet room and let yourself "go heavy" on the bed—no tension. Warm compresses on the eyes to relax the eye muscles. Use a double-strength eye solution and dilute with an equal quantity of hot water. Cleanse your face with cream, but leave on only a thin film of cream while you rest. Curlers, heavy cream and binding clothes interfere with perfect rest.

A half-hour of peace before dinner will make a new woman out of you.

High Beef Prices Laid to Middleman

By the Associated Press.

An AAA official advised beefsteak consumers yesterday a wide spread between farm and retail beef prices helps account for the 10-cent-per-pound increase in sirloins over last year.

D. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel, indignantly declared the post-drought cattle shortage does not entirely account for the sharp rise in round steak and rib roast prices.

In July a year ago, the consumer paid $7.33 more for 100 pounds of beef than the farmer received, live weight.

Federal Strikes 'Intolerable,' Roosevelt Says

Holds Bargaining Cannot Be Transplanted to Public Service.

President Roosevelt yesterday reiterated his views that unionized Federal employes must not strike or use militant tactics.

He added, "The process of collective bragaining, as usually understood, cannot be transplanted into public service."

A copy of the President's opinion was sent to Jacob Baker, president of the C. I. O.'s United Federal Workers of America, as well as to Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Mr. Roosevelt said Federal workers' organizations have a place in the Government. "But meticulous attention should be paid to the special relationships and obligations of public servants to the public itself, and to the Government."

Baker expressed satisfaction with the President's dictum. He was especially happy, he said, that "the President realistically realizes the need of Government employes for a union."

Pointing out that the obligation of the employes to serve the whole people is "paramount," Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Militant tactics have no place in the function of an organization of Government employes. Since their own services have to do with the functioning of the Government, a strike of public employes manifests nothing less than an intent on their part to prevent or obstruct the operations of government until heir demands are satisfied."

"Such action looking forward to the paralysis of government by those who have sworn to support it is unthinkable and intolerable."

Cripples Get New Schools, Better Homes

Langdon and Anthony Bowen Buildings to Be Used for Handicapped.

Following a report the Weightman and Magruder schools for crippled children were "firetraps," the School Board tomorrow will announce transfer of white crippled children to Langdon School and colored crippled children to Anthony Bowen School.

The report was issued by the Fire Department some time ago and made public late last month. Yesterday it was learned workmen have been preparing new quarters for the children for some time and they will be ready for occupancy the opening day of school, September 20.

The new quarters are in fireproof buildings and in both schools are located on the first floors, making access easy for the handicapped children. Weightman and Magruder schools, while condemned for cripples, are safe for other children and probably will be used as regular grade schools.

While Langdon and Anthony Bowen are not centrally located, the board decided they were the only school buildings not overcrowded and able to offer first floor classrooms. Langdon is in the northeast section, Anthony Bowen in the southwest.

Bus service for the crippled children will be maintained. A ramp and covered entryway at each school from the street for the buses are being constructed by a corps of workmen. Funds for the construction work necessary will come from the regular repair funds.

Man Found in Street Badly Hurt, Unconscious

Police last night were attempting to establish identity of a man about 35 years old found unconscious in the street at Third and D streets northwest. Physicians at Casualty Hospital said he was in a serious condition, with a possible skull fracture. He was described as being 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds and having blond hair.

Year's Output of D. C.'s Factories Valued at $74,010,498.

If all Washington's offices were placed side by side and spread out in a vast patchwork quilt, they probably would cover the better part of three counties. Whereas 44 per cent of its population is employed in white-collar work, its industrial workers represent only 1.5 per cent—one-tenth the proportion engaged in manufacturing in Rochester, N. Y., a city of about the same size.

Yet certain sections of the city present panoramas worthy of the camera of Margaret Bourke-White—dynamic patterns of cranes and smokestacks which might be scenes from industrial Pittsburgh rather than from the paradise of office-workers.

From the K street waterfront, the only glimpse of white marble which one gets is a section of Arlington Memorial Bridge. Husky colored men load gravel on barges and flat cars. Yellow smoke puffs from tall stacks, and steam whistles shriek spasmodically.

Washington's 493 industrial establishments employed 8,917 wage earners during 1935, according to a recent report of the Census Bureau. They paid out $13,240,779 in wages and spent $28,074,923 on materials, fuel and electricity. The result of the year's activities was a collection of varied products valued at $74,010,498.

The Census Bureau divides local manufacturers into 28 main categories, running all the way from "beverages, nonalcoholic," through "structural and ornamental metal work, made in plants not operated in connection with rolling mills." There are other types of plants, of course, but figures are not disclosed for industries represented here by less than three establishments.

Washington's largest industry, judged from the number of workers and plants located in the District, is baking. There are 96 bakeries operating here, with a total of 1,705 wage-earners. The printing and publishing of books and music is not far behind, with 86 plants.

Newspaper and periodical production, a category from which all Government publications are excluded, tops both these groups with respect to the wages it pays. Eighty-four plants devoted to magazines and newspapers paid their 1,678 employes $3,295,333 in wages during 1935, a sum which exceeds the bakeries' payroll by nearly $1,000,000 and is nearly twice that of the book and music publishers for roughly the same number of employes.

According to the Census Bureau, the value of Washington's newspapers and magazines during 1935 was $21,556,351, or nearly a third of the total of all manufactures.

Smallest industries classified by the bureau are electroplating, jewelry and the manufacture of paints, pigments and varnishes. Each type is represented by three plants here. Electroplating establishments employed 14 men in 1935, and the jewelry and paint industries employed seven each. The total value of the products of the three groups was less than $100,000 in each case during 1935.

Newspapers Leading in Wages; Cheese, Springs Made Here.

Many things are made here unbeknownst to the average citizen, who might doubt the existence within the District's boundaries of plants making mattresses and bedsprings, headcheese and sausage - casing, stencils and brands and signs and advertising novelties. According to the 1935 census, Washington has sheet metal works (four of them), nine ice factories, eight planing mills, five drug and medicine plants and five stone-cutting establishments.

It's not a very big industrial center, but it's growing. Washington's factories in 1935 still were not producing as much as they did in 1929. But compared with the 1933 figures, the city is entering a boom period. The number of plants increased about 25 per cent between 1933 and 1935, and the value of products went up about $13,000,000.

D. C. Man Is Held In Fatal Accident

Danville, Ill., Sept. 5.—A Washington man, Charles Talbert, said by officials to be an Interior Department guard, was held by police today at Williamsport, Ind., a few miles north of here, after an automobile accident which killed two persons.

Killed in the accident were Mrs. Virginia Kaniesski and her 4-year-old son, Franklin Roosevelt Kaniesski.

Who should a colored burglar see as he was starting downstairs with $1,240 worth of jewelry picked up in bedrooms of the home of James B. Sutton, 404 Twenty-third street northeast, last night, but a couple of policemen.

Privates Sam Tillett and Jeff Henry were the policemen and they had been called to the house by a neighbor, who had noticed the glass broken in the front door of the Sutton home. The Suttons were away.

Antietam Visitors Driven to Shelter

Day's Features Rained Out; Historical Exhibits Recall Dunker Church 'Miracle,' How Gen. Sherman Hated Reporters.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 5.—A gray rain curtaining the surrounding landscape made puddles today of the Antietam Exposition Grounds and washed out the chief features planned for the second day of the two-week celebration.

People clung to the exhibition buildings or stood in the midway tents, watching the driving rain in temperature 30 degrees below the 100 registered yesterday.

The flags and bunting lost their brightness and the trees shook big drops of water. The midway barker's cry had the washed-out sound of a wet day at a fair. But the historical exhibit, in a big building, was bright with the things of history.

A farmer, C. U. Boyer, was standing by the Dunker Church exhibit. The church was a small white structure that stopped many bullets and fragments of cannon balls when the Battle of Antietam was fought 75 years ago. The only reminders now of the church are eight or ten pews that seem but rough wooden benches, the original Bible, a couple of window-frames and some photographs that show clearly the bullet scars. These are in the exhibit.

Recalls When Church Fell.

The eyes of Farmer Boyer seemed turned inward on what to him and to hundreds of others of this countryside was an enigma, a puzzling act of Providence to be regarded reverently. For a very strange thing happened one day at the church.

The building had weathered man's bullets and iron shot and had withstood the winds and rains of years. Services were held there once a month or so. Its structural worthiness never was questioned. One day, about 15 years ago, a party of farmers was working the nearby land. A windstorm threatened. They ran to the church for shelter. The door always would be open, but then, with the storm raging, the door could not be forced. The farmers ran into a stable, a more flimsy structure, nearby. They had not been there more than five minutes before the Dunker church, landmark of the battle, fell with splintering timbers to the ground. E. G. Boyer, a brother of the narrator, bought the fallen timbers and some surrounding ground for $800 and loaned the pews and window-sashes to the exhibition.

The exhibits, for the most part, were gathered by Washington County school children in a "treasure hunt" last spring. In the middle of the floor is the wagon that hauled John Brown, astride his coffin, to the gallows in 1859. Next to it is an ancient Wells-Fargo Express wagon.

All around are such things as wooden school benches of 1857, blacksmith's tools 100 years old, a colonial living room, a Victorian hallway, the rifles and flintlocks that beat off Indian raids, Windsor and ladderback chairs, snakefoot and tilt-top tables, blankets that warmed settlers 150 years ago, ancient compasses and hooked rugs, early American sideboards, Civil War officers' uniforms and the cradles of pioneer babies.

Not caring to brave the rain, people talked with one another of all sorts of things. A man grew sad about the Confederate Cemetery here. The dead men were brought from Antietam and buried—3,000 of them—in half an acre of ground. There is a monument erected by the State of Maryland, but the individual graves are unmarked.

Another man argued that every celebration visitor should see the Washington monument, not the famous one in the Nation's Capital, but the first monument ever erected to the Revolutionary leader. It is on the highest pinnacle in the Cumberland Valley nearby.

Monument Signal Tower.

On uly 4, 1827, citizens of Boonsboro decided on the memorial, and on that morning ascended 1,200 feet from the floor of the valley. Within 24 hours they erected the monument of loose stone, without mortar. During the Antietam fighting it was used as a signal tower. Additions were made in 1882.

Another recalled how interested Mrs. Susan A. Santman, of Hagerstown, had been in the plans for the celebration. Mrs. Santman can remember what historians tell about the Antietam Battle. She was 17 then, is 92 now. She heard the firing near Sharpsburg, recalled the gunfire killed chickens in the village and how the women made chicken broth for the Confederates.

She climbed into a spring wagon, went to Williamsport with her cousin, Mrs. Elizabeth Hemphill, and gave food to the Union soldiers encamped there.

And this was lost in the talk of the monument to war correspondents in Crampton's Gap, on the Appalachian trail. It is the only existing monument to those bearded scribes who followed the Civil War armies. Gen. Sherman would dislike it. He disliked the correspondents fiercely said they disclosed his plans, anticipated him. Once, it is said, someone told him sorrowfully two correspondents had been killed by stray shot.

"Good," cried the general, "now we will have some news from hell before breakfast."

Being Just a Few Odds and Ends

By Bob Garrison.
(Pinch-hitting for Shirley Povich.)

"Labor Day, Oh Labor Day! You come but once a year!" the exclamation that converted the name, Mary Livingston (Mrs. Jack Benny) into a national excuse to laugh, was spoken in numerous accents yesterday as the bus carrying the Washington Redskins to their first game of the season at Frederick, Md., sped along Highway 240 . . . through the drawl of Riley (Ge Me Right Odds) Smith and the Boston twang of Dan MacCara, the transplanted Yankee, cast the same meaning . . . they were expressing the sentiments of the 30 boys making the trip . . . they were glad that Labor Day had arrived, for they are ready for football . . . but Owner Marshall wasn't, yesterday . . . He took a glance at the downpour from the window of his lomousine, hurdled mud puddles, to cofer wit hthe American Legion officials, who sponsored the game, under the stands and then suggested that the game be played today . . . but, although the boys had squeezed into their playing togs, they weren't too disappointed . . . for, as Eddie Michaels, watch-charm guard, ganwned, "the day was made for sleep."

* * * *

This Smith (former All-American back at Alabama University) fellow, incidentally, is a card . . . employed in the off season by an Alabama tombstone company, he can spot a piece of Alabama marble at first glance . . . and never manages to pass a stone structure without passing judgment on the caliber of the stone . . . and he will bet you on anything, provided you give him the right odds . . . one glance at the Washington Monument and he wanted to bet Wayne Millner, his buddy, that he could catch a baseball thrown from the 500-feet windows . . . and Millner is thinking of taking the bet . . . provided he is allowed to "drop" the ball . . . Smith is a pretty fair outfielder, having played pro ball in the Southern Cotton States League . . . he avers as how he would prefer a catcher's mitt, however, for his tedious task of catching the ball from the obelisque . . .

* * * *

You never know whom you will see on the stage of the local theafter that is presently billing Johnny Perkins . . . twice within the last week he has introduced sports personalities to his audience . . . and both times t'ey were members of the audience . . . early last week he called Lou Ambers lightweight champion, from the orchestra and introduced him from the stage . . . and Saturday night he called upon Lefty Gomez to take a bow . . . Gomez, who had just done a day's work at Griffith Stadium, shutting out the Nats, appeared on a New York stage with Perkins several years ago . . .

* * * *

A couple of former Nats who couldn't make the grade here in their several opportunities are presently the sensations of their respective leagues . . . Roberto Estalella, Charlotte outfielder, the leading home-run hitter in the Piedmont League, is still the property of the Washington ball club, but Ray Prim, hurling for San Francisco in the Coast League, where he has won 19 and lost 8, is due to come up with another big league team . . . Estalella attributes his powerful swing to his activity in the sugar fields of Cuba . . . "I was de best cane cutter around Cardina," he says. "Swinging the scythe in the same are like I hit at the ball is the secret of my success!" . . . the colorful islander has hit 31 homers and is batting .347 . . .

Trophies to be presented during the third annual Columbus Horse Show next Sunday are now on display in the show windows of an F street haberdashery . . . The show will be held at the Meadowbrook Grounds on the East-West highway midway . . . Ray Mangrum, who finished third in the Hershey (Pa.) Open yesterday, makes more money playing bridge than he does with his golf clubs . . . and Frank Shore, local tennis player, who is being married this week, used his bridge technique to defray his expenses through the University of North Carolina.

* * * *

Of course it may be only publicity, but John Busick, likable new agent at George Washington University, will tell you that three sopomore backs, labeled by Busick, the "three B's," will become stars this season . . . Ken Batson, Murphy Booth, and Elmore Borden, comprise the alliteration trio . . . Mike Jacobs is billing Marcel Thil, Frenchman, as the "middleweight champion of the world" when he appears on his carnival of champions the twenty-third of the month . . . what if Fred Apostoli, his opponent wins? Will he be acclaimed as champ? . . . When he was knocked out in the tenth round by Freddie Steele, who is champion for Washington's (State and city) money? . . . regardless of Jacobs' ballyhoo . . . Watch out for Gilbert Hunt today when he plays Frankie Parker, Davis Cup ace, in the National Tennis Tournament at Forest Hills . . . the local boy, potentially a net great, appears to be hot, and determined. Good Yontiff, Shirley!

Troops May Invade His Race Track

State Head Threatens to Send Soldiers and Police Squads.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 5.—Gov. Robert E. Quinn tonight announced State auditors ordered to examine the books of the Narragansett Racing Association, Inc., at the spacious million dollar Pawtucket horse race track were "locked out."

"But I'll send the auditors back," the young sandy-haired Rhode Island chief executive asserted, "and I'll give them all the force they need in carrying out the racing division's orders, even to calling out the State police and militia!"

The audit was ordered last night by State Racing Commission Chairman Francis J. Kiernan shortly after he declared the commission is acting perfectly within its rights in asking to look at the association's books."

A corps of auditors led by Raymond Appleby of the office of the State budget director went to the track this morning. Quinn said, and were denied admittance by Raymond J. McMahon, attorney for O'Hara.

Gov. Quinn and Commissioner Kiernan both reiterated their claims that O'Hara was "in our minds no longer managing director of the track."

"As an individual," Quinn said, "O'Hara can visit the track but steps will be taken if he attempts to carry out any duties of a managing director."

"To charge that I did threaten and intimidate a 200-pound 6-footer —James Doorley—is ridiculous," O'Hara asserted. Doorley is racing steward.

A restraining order, which O'Hara's attorney had obtained from Associate Judge Charles A. Walsh, of Superior Court, to block the ordered removal was vacated by Presiding Judge Jeremiah E. O'Connell, Judge O'Connell at the same time set down a hearing Wednesday on the request for a restraining order.

O'Hara denounced the commission's order as "persecution," and a move "to kill horse racing in Rhode Island."

U. S. Defeated In Dewar Shoot

Loses Trophy Held 11 Years to English Team.

By the Associated Press.

Camp Perry, Ohio, Sept. 5.—The United States Dewar small bore rifle team, holder of the International Dewar Trophy for 11 consecutive years since American marksmanship captured it from England in 1926, surrendered its possession today when it fired a score of 7,854 out of a possible 8,000—42 points under the English mark.

A stiff wind, resulting in the most difficult shooting conditions since the opening of the national rifle matches, handicapped the 20-man team which fired the match.

Colonial Eleven Leaves for Camp

George Washington University's football squad joins the pigskin parade today, moving down to Camp Letts, Md., located 10 miles from Annapolis, to open a two-week training session. The Colonial squad is expected to number about 45.

Thirty-five freshmen also will make the trip to battle for positions on the first-year squad.

Toronto, Sept. 5 (AP).—Firop Lemma, of Paterson, N. J., set a new world record for 112-pound weight lifters at the Canadian national exhibition Saturday night.

Goes Into Box in 7th With Score Tied; Gives Up But One Hit.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit Sept. 5 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox broke away from a seventh inning 2-to-2 tie today to beat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2, and lower to one game the margin the Tigers hold on second place in the American League.

Chicago's recovery followed Clinton Brown's replacement of John Whitehead on the mound for Chicago. Brown held the Tigers to one hit. Previously the Tigers had nicked Whitehead for six hits, among them Catcher Rudy York's thirty-first home run of the year.

The White Sox brought in three men in the eighth. F. Walker walked and advanced to third when Rip Radcliff doubled. Appling was intentionally passed, and Conners flied to Laabs in deep center, scoring Walker. Radcliff and Appling scored when Manager Jimmy Dykes doubled to left.

Rain Delays Tennis Play at Forest Hills

Revised Schedule Brings Parker and Gil Hunt Together Today; Budge Meets Abrams and Von Cramm Will Oppose Surface.

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Rain—rain—that didn't go away and that, the U. S. L. T. A. hopes, won't come again another day—today put a more effective damper on the high-ranking stars of the combined men's and women's national singles championships than any "dark horse" ever could have applied my means of an upset.

The storm that cracked down on the West Side Tennis Club last night also broke up last night. But this afternoon the rain let loose in bucketsful again, left puddles on the field courts and sent a squad of men, their pants legs turned up like those of little boys wading, scurrying out to spread tarpaulins over the stadium turf.

It also forced a revision of the program for tomorrow which promises to give the Labor Day thrill seekers every cent of their money's worth, with compound interest.

Not only will the upper-half brackets in the round of 16 in both divisions be filled, but in addition the lower-half competitors, who advanced to the final round of 16 yesterday, will fight for berths in the quarter-finals.

By this telescoping of two days' competition into one, the U. S. L. T. A. hopes to adhere to the original schedule whereby the semifinals will be played on Friday and the finals on Saturday—barring, of course, further weather interruptions.

This telescoping, however, also gave the tournament officials a neat problem in assigning the various matches to courts worthy of their appeal. Don Budge, top-seeded American contender for the undefended men's title; Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Polish threat to Alice Marble's women's crown; Helen Jacobs, Miss Marble's predecessor and second-seeded domestic star, and Frank Parker, Budge's Davis Cup teammate and potential semifinal opponent, all in the upper half of their draws, will play in the stadium. Parker opposes Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C.

So, to, will Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, top-ranking foreigner, who will be opposed by Hal Surface in his bid for a quarter-final berth; and Miss Marble, with Margot Lumb, English Wightman Cup player, who is eighth on the foreign seeded list, as her rival for a spot in the round of eight.

Women's matches in the round of 16 scheduled for field courts will pair Anita Lizana, chunky Chilean ranked behind "Jeddy" with brunette Carolin Babcock, No. 7 U. S. contender; Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, No. 4 American, with pert Freda James, English No. 7, and slugging Dorothy May Bundy, U. S. No. 6, with Marie Luise Horn, of Germany, No. 4 foreigner.

Tennis Schedule

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—The revised program of stadium and grandstands matches in the men's and women's national singles championships tomorrow at the West Side Tennis Club (time is Eastern Standard):

Stadium.

11:15 a. m.—Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Poland, vs. Edna C. Smith, Cleveland, Ohio. (Upper half, second round.)

12 noon—J. Donald Budge, Oakland, Calif., vs. Joseph L. Abrams, New York. (Upper half, third round.)

1:00 p. m.—Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif., vs. Millicent Hirsh, New York. (Upper half, second round.)

1:45 p. m.—Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Germany, vs. J. Hal Surface, Jr., Kansas City, Mo. (Lower half, fourth round.)

3 p. m.—Frank A. Parker, Milwaukee, Wis., vs. Gilbert Hunt, Jr., Washington, D. C. (Upper half, third round.)

4:30 p. m.—Alice Marble, San Francisco, Calif., vs. Margot E. Lumb, England. (Lower half, third round.)

Grandstand.

12:15 p. m.—Yvon Petra, France, vs. Gardnar Mulloy, Miami, Fla. (Upper half, third round.)

1:45 p. m.—Katharine Stammers, England, vs. Katharine Winthrop, Boston, Mass. (Upper half, second round.)

2:45 p. m.—Bryan M. Grant, Jr., Atlanta, Ga., vs. Wayne Sabin, Hollywood, Calif. (Lower half, fourth round.)

Rally in Ninth Aids Dodgers To Beat Phils

Score 2 Runs to Win, 6-4; Henshaw Halts Losers With 9 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—Scoring four runs off Bucky Walters in the first inning, the Brooklyn Dodgers added two more in the ninth today for a 6 to 4 victory over the Philadelphia Nationals.

Rain forced postponement of the scheduled second game after drenching players and fans all through the first.

Dolph Camilli hit his twenty-first home run for the Phils in the second inning and Chuck Klein contributed another in the ninth.

Roy Henshaw pitched the full game for the Dodgers, allowing nine hits.

Reds Divide Double Bill With Cards

Take Opener by 3-to-2 Count; Lose Nightcap by Shutout.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 5.—The Reds scored three runs on four hits in one inning to take the opener from the Cards, 3 to 2, here today, but dropped the final game of a double-header, 1 to 0.

The first game was delayed until 3 p. m. because of a wet field.

The nightcap was a pitchers' battle between Warneke and Hollingsworth, each allowing four hits. Moore scored the only run in the third when Riggs fumbled a grounder by Medwick. With the bases still loaded, Bordagaray hit into a double play by way of the plate to retire the side.

Schott scored his second victory of the season in the opener.

The Reds' rally came in the sixth when Myers bunted, Schott singled and Walker bounced a double in the rightfield bleachers, scoring Myers. Schott and Walker scored when Goodman's single bounced away from Brown.

Poor Richard, who had been working down in the Southern Association, learned in that third inning that it is true what they had been saynig about Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig. Because after he had served a pitch to each

Pirates Take Double Bill From Cubs; Idle Giants Lead by 2 Games

HENRY PICARD'S RECORD 280 WINS HERSHEY OPEN

2d Contest Is Protested By Chicago

Grimm Challenges Ruling by Umpire; Bucs Win 7-0 and 4-1.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—The Chicago Cubs, who led the National League for 11 weeks, at one time by seven games, continued their collapse today by scoring only one run in a double-header against Pittsburgh and dropping both games, 7 to 0, and 4 to 1. The twin defeats, suffered before a home-coming throng of 34,091, dropped the Chicagoans to two full games behind the idle New York Giants.

Red Lucas shut them out on six hits the first game, while the Pirates were bunching 10 off Larry French. Ed Brandt, assisted by Mace Brown, minimized 11 Cub hits in the nightcap, stranding Cubs on third in every inning from the fourth through the eighth. The Pirates meanwhile, found four blows off Clay Bryant, only one of which went past the infield, sufficient for their twelfth triumph in 19 meetings with the Chicagoans this season.

The second game, however, was finished under protest by Manager Charlie Grimm of the Cubs on the basis of a disputed decision by Umpire Lee Ballanfant on which the Pirates scored the second of their runs in the fifth inning. By ruling out a Pirate base runner, upon whom the Cubs claimed they made no play, Ballanfant permitted a Pittsburgh runner, who otherwise would have been forced at the plate, to score.

The setting for the intricate situation was provided when three passes by Bryant, sandwiched around a fielder's choice, pushed one Pirate run across and left the bases filled with one out.

Taking Lloyd Waner's grounder, Second Baseman Billy Herman rifled it to the plate in time to force Bill Brubaker, coming in from third. Umpire in Chief George Magerkurth called Brubaker out, but reversed the decision, however, after receiving a signal from Ballanfant, stationed at first base, that Ed Brandt was out en route from first to second, thus removing the force at the plate on Brubaker, who hadn't been tagged by Catcher Gabby Hartnett.

Wehrle Wins Western on Final Hole

Chuck Kocsis Bows to Victor's Birdie, Was 4 Down.

Los Angeles, Sept. 5 (AP).—Wilford Wehrle, 22-year-old wax worker from Racine, Wis., won the thirty-eighth amateur championship today, defeating steel-nerved Charles (Chuck) Kocsis, of Detroit, 1 up, in 36 holes of madcap golf.

Time and again the smiling Wisconsin star broke Kocsis' heart with the wizardry of his putting, but the biggest break came on the thirty-sixth green.

One up as they paraded to the final hole in front of a gallery of sun-baked fans, Wehrle reached the carpet 30 feet from the cup, Kocsis was already on, 8 feet away, and ready to sink it to square the battle.

Wehrle called over to his former classmate and links pal, Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., whom he defeated in yesterday's semifinals:

"Don't let it get you down, Ray."

Then he lined up his putt quickly and sank it—running to the cup behind it. It gave him a birdie 3—his eighth of the two rounds—and the match.

Kocsis 4 Down.

Kocsis, 1936 National Intercollegiate champion from Michigan, went into the afternoon round 4 down as the morning saw curly-haired Wilford card a medal 69, 2 under par. Chuck had 76.

Undismayed, Kocsis bore down, and by the twenty-ninth he was only 1 down. It was the nearest he came to overhauling the Flying Dutchman.

Neither was able to get a birdie on the last nine until the final hole, adn then Wehrle got his first. Kocsis never surrendered, and matched blow for blow through the last seven holes. "He was too tough to beat," said the stolid Kocsis.

"I knew I had to get that last one down. He was putting too well to take a chance," was Wehrle's compliment to Chuck.

Kocsis could blame his defeat on the morning round. He left strokes in traps, trees, sand and water hazards. Yet in the afternoon he blazed back in the face of Wehrle's combined skill and luck.

D. C. Entrants Take Honors On West River

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 5.—John Hartge, jr., of Washington, sailed his trim boat Raven to victory today in the Albatross class of the West River Yacht Club's regatta.

Washington entrants took all places in this contest. Second was Delmas Stutler, in Saber, and third, Bill Heintz, in Madic.

Upward of 75 sailboats gathered at the mouth of West River for today's ten races of the regatta, which began yesterday. A storm coming up in the afternoon forced postponement of other contests, which will be held tomorrow.

Washington, Annapolis and West River contestants shared liberally in the honors in today's events.

The summaries:

Cox Signs for Nagurski Bout

Joe Cox, the big bad man of local rassling, and Joe Turner, the local mat impresario, are pictured in yesterday's contract-signing seance when Mr. Cox affixed his John Henry on papers that call for him to meet Bronko Nagurski, the reformed football player, for Bronko's "title" here next Friday.

Cox to Meet Nagurski on Stadium Mat

Capital Fans to See Title Battle, With All-Star Cast, Friday.

Joe Turner, local wrestling impresario, yesterday plucked off his biggest wrestling plum in years when he signed Joe Cox, the self-styled Kansas Krasher, for a title match next Friday night, at Griffith Stadium, with Bronko Nagurski, the recognized world's champion.

Cox, the records show, is the only wrestler to defeat Nagurski in some 270 matches, and this fact, plus his smashing victory over Jack Patterson the other night at the Stadium, made him the outstanding choice for the championship bout with the former All-American great from Minnesota.

Nagurski's contract to defend his crown is on its way from the Pacific Coast, along with the bustin' Bronko who is due to make his Eastern debut the early part of this week.

Promoter Turner is guaranteeing Nagurski $5,000 or 25 per cent of the gate to risk the throne he grabbed from Dean Detton by virtue of his victory over the Salt Lake City bone bender three months ago in Minneapolis.

The promoter would not say what Cox's end of the purse would be, but it is understood the Kansan would get the customary 15 per cent as challenger.

Thrice All-American while at Minnesota and hailed as one of the greatest all-around football players of all time, Nagurski has been packing 'em in on the Coast. He defended his title successfully against Vincent Lopez before 25,000 in Los Angeles several weeks ago, and since then has won six matches over other challengers.

Dallas, Sept. 5.—Chicago's burly Bears were 10-to-7 favorites tonight to defeat the College All-Stars tomorrow evening in the Cotton Bowl before an expected crowd of 35,000.

But betting didn't interest the professionals. They sought the answers to these questions: What's in store from the weather man? Will Sammy Baugh be off form?

Th former T. C. U. ace quarterback, who's tossed the pigskin more than 2 miles in his brilliant college career, will alternate with Buz Buivid, Marquette's All-American halfback.

Buzz is another fine passer and he and Baugh will have tall targets to shoot at—Walter Roach, of Texas Christian; Charles Galatke, of Mississippi State; Joe O'Neill, of Notre Dame; Bill Stages, of Texas A. and M., and Charlie Needham, of T. C. U.

The Bears have concentrated on a pass defense and hope to stop Sam. But George Halas, their coach and owner, refuses to be reconciled. He has sung the Blues since the Bruins tossed their uniforms off the train here.

"Baugh—how can we stop him? Look what he did to the Packers," runs the lament.

N. Y. Giants to Meet All-Star Collection

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—The fourth in the series of games between All-Star collections of recent college graduates and organized professional teams gives New York its first taste of gridiron warfare this week.

Already such affairs have taken place in Philadelphia and Chicago and the third is scheduled at Dallas, Tex., tomorrow.

New York's game at the Polo grounds Wednesday night is the second sponsored by the New York Herald-Tribune for its fresh air fund. With prices lowered since last year and interest heightened by the 6-0 triumph the Western All-Star team scored over the Green Bay Packers last week, a crowd of 40,000 is expected.

U. S. Track Stars Beat Italian Aces

25,000 in Milan See Yankees Take Seven First Places.

By the Associated Press.

Milan, Sept. 5.—A crowd of 25,000 spectators saw a team of American track and field stars capture first place in seven of 13 events in a meet with Italian champions today.

Outstanding performers for the Americans were George Varoff of the San Francisco Olympic Club, who pole vaulted 4.5 meters (14 feet 8 27-32 inches), Jack Patterson, of Dallas, Tex., who won the 400 meters hurdles in 53.4 seconds and placed second to Lee Roy Kirkpatrick, of Los Angeles, in the 110 meter timber event, and Elroy Robinson, of San Francisco, second in both the 400 and 800 meter runs.

Kirkpatrick won the high hurdles in 14.6 seconds while Patterson was timed in 14.8.

Robinson substituted for C. L. Belcher, of Georgia Tech, who pulled a muscle, in the 400 and finished only one-tenth of a second behind Missioni of Italy, who won in 48.8 seconds. Mario Lanzi, of Italy, was timed in 1:50.8 for the 800 meters while Robinson finished in 1:51.6.

Ben Johnson, New York Negro sprinter, was the only other American winner, turning in the fast time of 10.5 seconds to take the 100-meter dash. Luigi Beccali, of Italy, took the 1,500 meters in 3:57, while Pellin took the 3,000 meters in 8:37.2. There were no American entries in these races.

Cornelius Johnson, of Los Angeles, won the high jump with a leap of 2 meters 6 feet 6¾ inches). Ken Carpenter, of Los Angeles, threw the discus 49.54 meters (162 feet 6 7-16 inches), and Ray Allee, of San Francisco, took the shot put at 15.72 meters 51 feet 6 29-32 inches) for the other American triumphs.

Testa, of Italy, threw the javelin 61.28 meters (201 feet 21-32 inch) to beat out Bob Peoples, of Oklahoma City, whose best toss was 60.61 meters 198 feet 10 17-64 inches). Arutro Maffei, of Italy, won the broad jump with 7:35 meters (24 feet 1⅝ inches).

U. S. Tracksters Win in Japan

Tokyo, Sept. 5.—United States' visiting track and field team routed Japanese athletes again today, capturing six out of eight events for a total of 14 victories out of 17 in the two-day competition.

Jack Wierhauser, of San Francisco, was the individual star, winning both the hurdle events. He was timed in 54.5 over the 400-meter barriers and in 22.2 over the 200-meter timbers. In the latter event Allan Tolmich, of Wayne University, Detroit, placed second, and Robert Young, of San Francisco, was third.

Johnny Woodruff, lanky Pitt Negro, trotted to victory in the 800 meters, being clocked in 1:54.5 to beat out Charlie Fenske, of Wisconsin.

220-Yard Title To Erna Kompa

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 5.—Erna Kompa, crack entry of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, won the 220-yard backstroke title today in the National Senior Women's A. A. U. swimming championships.

The time was 2 minutes 57.5 seconds.

Going into the lead shortly after the start Miss Kompa won by 3 yards. Dorothy Forbes, of Philadelphia finished second, a few inches ahead of Mrs. Elizabeth Kompa Wright, of New York, a sister of the winner.

The American record for the event, set last year by Eleanor Holm Jarrett is 2 minutes 49.6 seconds.

Katherine Rawls, Florida star, scored her third triumph in the meet by winning the 440-yard freestyle. She was timed in 5:36, winning by 20 yards over Doris Brennan, of Olneyville, R. I. Betty Lea, of Seattle, took third.

Iris Cummings, of Los Angeles, successfully defended her 220-yard breast-stroke title. Elsie Petri, of New York, was second and Edith Pemberton, of Seattle, third. The time was 3 minutes 16.9 seconds.

Cunningham Boat Wins.

Oyster Bay, Long Island, Sept. 5 (AP).—Lulu Briggs Cunningham's 6-meter boat from the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club today completed the first successful defense of the Scandinavian Gold Cup by an American boat since the cup was put in circulation in 1919.

Corr, George Deoudes Tie, 3-3, in Title Clash

Deadlock in Second of Three Game Midget Play-Off Series When Celerymen Rally in 9th; Flood Takes Junior Lead; Georgetown Wins.

By Jack Munhall.

Brilliant pitching feats lit up an otherwise rainy, dreary day on the sandlots yesterday as some of the best pitching of the season was produced in the National City Baseball League.

In the feature clash, Corr Bicycle Shop was thwarted in its attempt to annex the midget championship when a desperate George Deoudes nine fought back with two runs in the ninth inning to deadlock the second of their three-game play-off series at 3-3.

One of the largest crowds to witness a midget contest this season arrayed themselves on the South Ellipse and were treated to a close, well-pitched game as Dick Rozella and Dick O'Brien renewed their pitching feud inaugurated last Sunday, when Rozella bested the St. John's student, 3-2, in another slab duel. Yesterday O'Brien probably deserved a better break, for the youngster allowed Corr but four safeties and were it not for errors in that fatal, belated outburst would have been the victor. Rozella again turned in a creditable exhibition, scattering seven hits and fanning a like number.

In the only unlimited game scheduled, the amazing Georgetown A. C. capitalized on the latest superb mound effort of its sensational newcomer, Glenn Whitt, to cling to second place in the B section. Behind Whitt's five-inning, one-hit flinging the West End lads blanked the Clarendon Cardinals, 3-0. The winners scored all their runs in the first two innings, one in the first and a pair in the second. Dugan led the attack with two hits and two runs.

In another well-pitched affair J. C. Flood climaxed its driving second half rush by defeating the erstwhile co-leading Police Boys Club No. 5 team, 6 to 4, to grab undisputed possession of first place in the junior league. A two-run assault in the eighth and last inning provided the winning margin. Louis West for the winners gave up but five hits, and only one after the second inning to best the combined efficiency of Rip Carver and Lefty Stockwell, who yielded the Plumbers seven blows. Carver fanned 11 men in his seven-inning turn on the mound and was touched for four hits.

Jimmy DeChard doled George's Radio four hits as Police Boys Club No. 4 upset the first half junior champion, 2 to 1, despite class A flinging from Butch Woods. Woods was prodded for eight hits but was effective in the pinches. Centerfielder Needle contributed several outstanding catches which helped Wood to restrict the winners from further scores. The game was won in the sixth inning when Murphy singled moved to third on a hit and run single by DeChard and scored on a blast by Curtis after two men had been retired.

Kid Chocolate Wins.

Havana, Sept. 5 (AP).—Kid Chocolate, Cuban featherweight, brought his comeback campaign to the home folks today and outpointed Phil Baker, of Norwalk, Conn., in a ten-round bout before a wildly enthusiastic crowd.

Wins Checker Title.

Martins Ferry, Ohio, Sept. 5 (AP).—Asa Long, of Toledo, added the United States checker championship to his world title today when Willie Ryan, of New York, withdrew from the finals after he and Long had played eight draw games.

Redskins' Opener Is Rained Out

Grid Game With Legion All-Stars Scheduled Today, Rain or Shine.

By Bob Garrison.

The Washington Redskins, Mr. George Marshall's entry into the National Professional Football League, were stopped yesterday by a one-man offensive, who clipped from behind.

Although rained out in their scheduled game at Frederick, Md., against the American Legion All-Stars, the mighty chieftains fell victim of a pale-faced corporal while en route over the blazed trail to the home of Barbara Frietchie.

Just before entering Rockville, the half-way mark, the bus carrying the team was ordered to the side of the road by an authoritative voice bellowing from a yellow sedan about half the size of the Indians' van. The entire bus load of players, coaches and newspapermen were led to the jail, where charges of reckless driving were placed against the driver of the bus, Thomas S. Miller.

He was charged with driving on the wrong side of the road while passing another automobile by his apprehender, Corpl. J. R. Miller, of the Maryland State Police. The troupe of players, under the direction of Ray Flaherty and Roy Baker, coaches, proceeded to Frederick.

But a sudden downpour of rain which fell shortly before the scheduled game time forced the postponement of the game, an unique decision on the part of club heads. The postponement is in keeping with the new school of thought, however, coaches pointed out, that will be adhered to throughout the country this season.

The debut will be delayed until this afternoon, when the Legion All-Stars are scheduled to be met at McCurdy Field at 2:30, rain or shine, the Redskins management announced.

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Narragansett.

Maryland turf fans will have a peek at Sky Larking, the Milky Way Farm's winner of the Hopeful, but they will have to wait for the Pimlico Futurity. The Milky Way Farm and Trainer Bob McGarvey are fortunate in having two of the best 2-year-olds to show this year. In Tiger, the stable has a colt that many believe can take the measure of his stablemate. However, Trainer McGarvey reserves opinion on the subject if he has one. He has been alternating them instead of running them as an entry. Both came into best form this summer. They will be named for next year's Kentucky Derby. I see that Silvo Coucci has quit the saddle due to increasing weight. Coucci won $319,706 in 1935. Of late he has been riding well but he has found it almost impossible to meet the weight requirements. Coucci was a credit to his profession. I have heard tales of virtually all riders, but none that involved the gentlemanly, young Italian-American. I understand he saved money and studied. Hence his retirement as a jockey will not be a blow to him. Well, we have a brand-new track today. Here goes. BILL.

First race—U Demon seems nicely placed in the day's opener. Likes this route and I see no reason for mistakes. Melody Lane will not be far out of it. Palm Island has some races that would make him a keen contender here.

Second race—Hot Cake turned in a nice second last out and needs only to run back to that effort to collect the chief money in this field. Two Edged is in good form and promises to be a factor. Lillian Z. to take care of the others.

Third race—Masked Gal has been earning her way this summer and appears to be in position to pick up another purse. Count Dean and Lady Thatcher figure to complete the money bracket.

Fourth race—Odd Blue is better than a green hand at this route and promises to do a lot of running. I'm going to string along. Top Tax has plenty of speed and may force Rough Party into third money.

Fifth race—Old Nassau is in excellent condition and recent races indicate a victory in this sort of company. Needs only the right ride. Tinder Box figures close to the top one. Knight Haven may be along in time to take the show award.

Sixth race—Heelfly, with that burning speed, gets the edge over this excellent field. Sparta should not be far out of it and is dangerous. Fair Knightess is a front runner of ability and may last long enough to make it interesting.

Seventh race—Miss Marlboro, at home at this route, gets my call over Peedeeque in this distance affair. Both are as fit as hands can make them and have good recent efforts to their credit. Chief Yeoman should be no worse than third.

Eighth race—Opoca and Dormido promis to fight it out in this field. Lugano is a fair sort and should at least take a portion of the purse.

Best bet—Masked Gal.

Timonium.

1—Proteus, Lady Buck, Gee Sharp.
2—Dark Supinet, Clague, Rouge Catalan.
3—Sir Isaac, Aella, Mary Wales.
4—Acute, Waugh Scout, Broken Rhythm.
5—Brides Delight, Inactive, Prince Turley.
6—Toothpick, Tambov, Divided Skirt.
7—Mint Bud, Shebang, Kepi.
8—Jimmy D., Tuleyries Star, Bonnie Dhu.

Best bet—Toothpick.

Senators Entrain For Eastern Tour

Facing double-headers on four successive days, the Nats entrained last night for an Eastern tour that will carry them into Boston, Philadelphia and New York.

Today and tomorrow the Nats will battle the Red Sox in twin bills. Nine straight times they have beaten the Boston club. Wes Ferrell will pitch the opener, probably against Lefty Grove. Rookie Ray Phebus, recently recalled from Chattanooga, will oppose the Red Sox in the second game.

Armstrong, Burns Bout Tops Week

Light Boxing Program on Tap; No Champs Are Scheduled.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 5.—One of the lightest national boxing programs of the summer season is on tap for the fans this week.

Two of the most interesting bouts will find Henry Armstrong, sensational Los Angeles Negro, going against Charlie Burns, of Johnstown, Pa., in a 10-rounder at Pittsburgh Thursday night, while the same evening Billy Beauhuld, up and coming Jersey City lightweight, fights the sharp-punching Al Roth in another 10-round engagement in Madison Square Garden here.

Monday—At Long Branch, N. J.: Maurice Strickland, New Zealand, vs. Tiger Leo Brown, Allentown, Pa., heavyweights, 10; George Daley, England, vs. Johnny Toomey Newark, lightweights, 10; Bob Scalley, Scotland, vs. Johnny Brizza, England, light-heavies, 8.

Tuesday—At Holyoke, Mass.: Mickey Makar, Jersey City, vs. Andre Jessurun, New York, welterweights, 10. At Chicago: Davey Day, Chicago, vs. Charley Gemer, Brooklyn, lightweights, 10. At Los Angeles: Georgia Hansford, Los Angeles vs. Chalky Wright, Los Angeles, featherweights, 10. At Charlotte, N. C.: Normont Quarles, Hendersonville, N. C. vs. Billy Bullock, Washington, lightweights, 10; Al Massey, Charlotte vs. Tex Hammer, Savannah, Ga., heavyweights, 8. At New York: Vernon Cormier, Worcester, Mass., vs. Lou Camps, New York, featherweights, 8. At Elizabeth, N. J.: Buddie Ryan, Roselle, N. J., vs. Ray Miller, Newark, lightheavies, 6; Joey Ryan Roselle, vs. Lary Lane, Trenton, middleweights, 8; Larry Scalone, Newark, vs. Jimmy Walsh, Newark, middleweights, 6.

Wednesday—At Philadelphia: Lorenzo Pack, Detroit, vs. Basher Dean, Newark, heavyweights, 10; Paul Pirone, Cleveland, vs. Johnny Duca, Paulsboro, N. J., middleweights, 10. At Cincinnati: Eddie Cerda, Mexico City, vs. Si Nebolosky, Cincinnati, welterweights, 10. At Oakland, Calif.: Domingo Valin, Hayward, Calif., vs. Jim McVey Pittsburgh, heavyweights, 10.

Thursday—At Tacoma, Wash.: Ford Smith, Kalispel, Mont. vs. Wild Bill Boyd, Tacoma, heavyweights, 10. At New York: Al Roth, New York, vs. Billy Beauhuld, Jersey City, lightweights, 10; Frankie Blair, Camden, N. J., vs. Mickey Serrian, New York, lightweights 8. At Pittsburgh: Henry Armstrong, Los Angeles, vs. Charlie Burns, Johnstown, Pa., lightweights, 10.

10,000 See Buc Eleven Beat Eagles

Johnny Blood Runs 95 Yards for Touchdown in Last Quarter.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.—The Pittsburgh Pirates smothered the Philadelphia Eagles under a barrage of long passes today to open the National Professional Football League season with a sparkling 27-14 triumph.

"Thin Man" Johnny Blood, playing coach of the Pirates, galloped 92 yards to return a kickoff for a touchdown in the fourth quarter and snatched a 44-yard pass from Max Fiske for Pittsburgh's other touchdown in the same period. The inaugural was played in perfect grid weather, with many of the 10,000 fans wearing topcoats.

No rain fell during the afternoon, but a downpour this morning caused the contest to be postponed. It was rescheduled shortly before noon.

The Pirates took the lead midway in the first period on a 49-yard aerial thrust.

Halfback Clarence Thompson threw a hard fast spiral to Edwin Brett, former Washington State end, on the 12-yard line and he raced over the goal. Izzy Weinstock place-kicked the extra point.

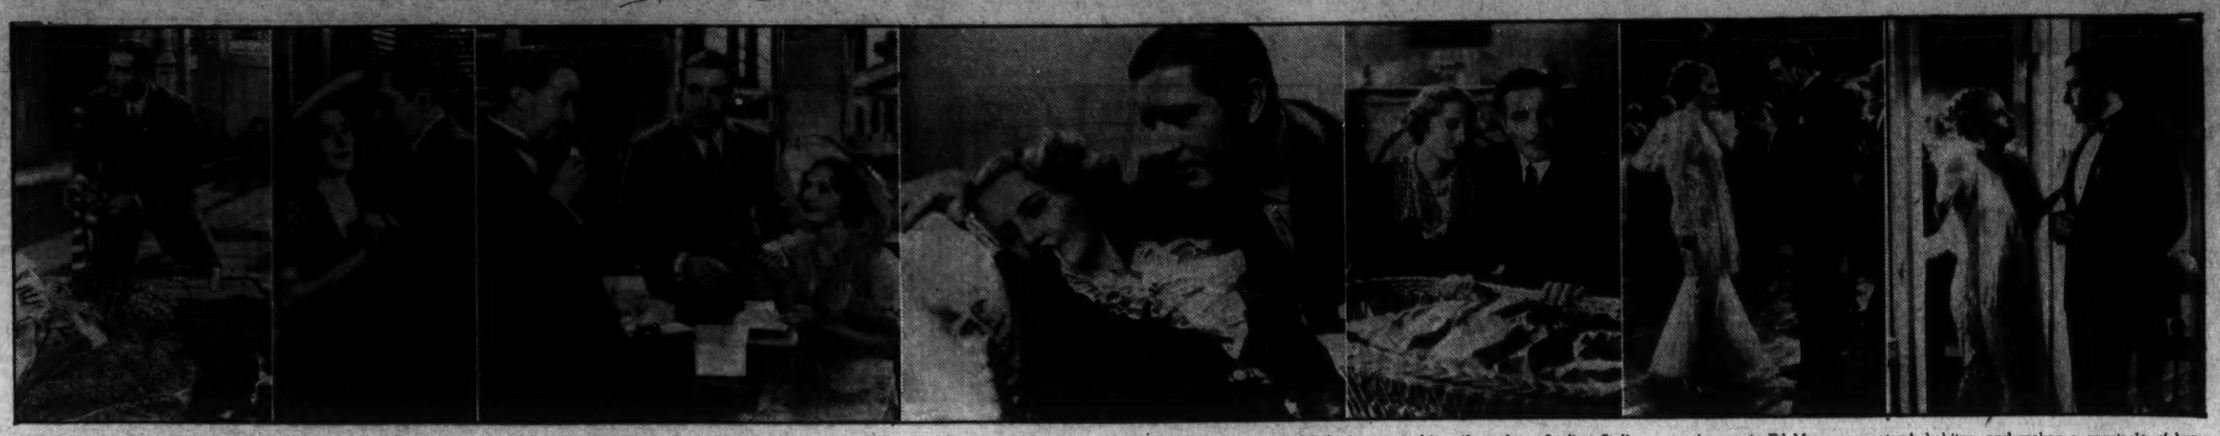
"STELLA DALLAS"

A Photo-serial in six chapters based on the SAMUEL GOLDWYN screenplay starring BARBARA STANWYCK and JOHN BOLES. Released thru UNITED ARTISTS. Coming Friday Loew's Palace.

CHAPTER 1



Financially ruined by his father's suicide, Stephen Dallas resolves to migrate to a distant city. Even Helen Dale, the girl he loves, can not deter him. He settles in a little mill town, where he makes rapid strides in business. But his life is a lonely one. Especially so when he learns by accident that Helen has married a man she met while traveling abroad.

Meanwhile, Stella Martin, the pretty daughter of a millhand, has become secretly infatuated with Stephen. She uses a clever ruse to attract his attention; soon Stephen is grateful for her company. Though she has little education and less culture, his loneliness causes him to fall in love with her.

Marriage culminates the romance, and Stephen is certain that Stella will learn to become the lady he wants his wife to be. At first Stella, thrilled with her beautiful home and luxurious clothes, tries to please Stephen. But as the months roll by, his meticulous habits begin to pall.

After their daughter Laurel is born, Stella can no longer resist her old slovenly, pleasure-loving ways. Stephen is especially humiliated when he escorts her to the country club. Stella is overdressed and showy; she meets Ed Munn, a racetrack habitue, and makes a spectacle of herself on the dance floor.

Stephen, who is being promoted to the New York office of his firm, implores his wife to change her ways and go with him. She refuses, and Stephen goes without his wife and baby.

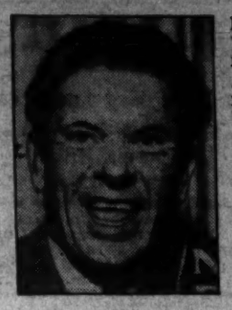
Bob Burns Says—



People who brag about themselves very seldom get compliments from other people. I know a woman down home whose husband had suddenly come into a lot'ta money for not raisin' hogs, and the first thing she did was send away and get a ring with a big blue stone in it. In order to show this ring off, she invited some of the ladies of the town to her house for tea. If she hadn't said anything about the ring, the ladies would have noticed it and complimented her on it, but when they saw her deliberately flauntin' the ring in their faces by holdin' her finger out when she drank her tea, all the other ladies froze up on her.

Finally in desperation, she held the ring out in front of Aunt Boo and says, "What do you think of my new ring?" Aunt Boo says, "Well, it's right pretty. I always did like that kind of stone. Our mantel piece at home is made out of that kind of stuff."

3 Drown, 7 Die In Crashes as Holidays Begin

Two Crushed to Death as 100,000 Quit City Over the Week-End.

Wheaton to Kensington, Md. Police said they passed and repassed each other in a wild ride.

Wolfe, at the wheel of the pursuing car, either was struck by the front car cutting across his fender or overtook the front car and bumped it, police said. Wolfe's car skidded 96 feet and smashed into a telegraph pole, instantly killing him and Butler, who was in the seat beside him.

For his part in the accident John C. Wingrove, 19, of 2511 Twenty-second street northeast, driver of the front car, was charged with manslaughter, reckless driving and failing to stop after an accident. He was released under $1,500 bond for hearing September 24. In Wingrove's car as passengers were Victor Murphy, 21, of 723 Sligo avenue, Silver Spring, and his cousin, Raymond Murphy, 21, of the same address. Al Pratt, of 230 Maple avenue, Takoma Park, Md., asleep in the back seat of the wrecked car, was only slightly injured.

Howard Sheets, 21, son of a Fairfax carpenter, was killed near Alexandria when the car in which he was riding collided with a heavy truck driven by Floyd Williams, of Midland, N. C. Miss Mary Dorries, of Sunset Hills, Va., riding with Sheets, suffered minor injuries.

Robert Johnson was killed near Leonardtown, Md., when a truck in which he was riding turned over and threw him out.

W. F. Walker, 58, a shipping clerk, was killed near Fredericksburg, Va., in a three-car collision.

Mrs. Ellis A. Smouse, 55, was killed when a car in which she was riding was crowded off the Lincoln highway near Everett, Pa.

Two Drown While Wading.

The two Hyattsville youths were drowned yesterday morning while wading in the South River at Glen Isle. They were caught by an undertow and carried out into the stream. The bodies were recovered.

Other members of the family were saved from the same fate by the heroic efforts of George B. Dove, father of Robert. Mrs. Katherine Routt and Miss Eleanor Dove, sisters of Robert, and George Dove a brother, were also caught in the current, but were pulled ashore by their father.

A Naval Academy boat was still searching for the body of Joseph Bell, drowned when he fell from a fishing boat at the mouth of South River, a mile from the other tragedy.

Clara Mae Shifflet, 11-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Shifflett, Edgemere, Md., was killed and her parents and two other persons injured when the car in which they were riding collided with a truck near Madison, Va.

The parents, with William Morris and Daniel Beddows, both of Booneville, were taken to University Hospital, Charlottesville, Va. J. W. Phillips, Bowling Green, Va., driver of the truck, was not injured.

Storms Spoil Holiday.

As death stalked through the merrymaking of the three-day holiday, storms arose to spoil the pleasure of 100,000 Washingtonians who fled from torrid heat to nearby beaches for the week-end.

Scores were endangered when a sudden northeaster lashed the North Shore of Chesapeake Bay, catching fishermen in small boats and bathers unexpectedly. All escaped. Many vacationers headed homeward a day early.

Continued showers and cooler weather was the forecast for this vicinity for today. A rainstorm in Washington dropped the temperature from a high of 83 at noon to 67 at 6 o'clock, with the mercury steadily slipping downward at night.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was reported recovering at Emergency Hospital from scalp wounds received Saturday night when his car skidded on wet pavement and crashed into another car near Woodlawn, Va.

Numerous minor automobile crashes were recorded throughout the city yesterday, but none resulted in any casualties. However, Frank Burroughs, 11, of 1656 Rosedale street northeast, was in critical condition in Gallinger Hospital after he fell from his bicycle and sustained a possible hemorrhage of the brain.

Other traffic casualties include Joseph Murphy of Northville, and William Harper of Sunnyside; Murphy suffering a fractured skull and Harper lacerations; Joseph Aloysius Scannell, 66, of 1215 Ninth street northwest, who suffred a possible skull fracture.

Julian C. Smith, 48, of Alexandria, face lacerations; Bernard Herndon, 32, bruises; Sarah Johnson, colored, 45, Alexandria, fractured rib; Wallace Briggs, 53, Chesney, S. C., undetermined head injuries; William Bradley, colored, 26, 130 F street northwest, severe lacerations; Sarah Perry, colored, 32, and James Robertson, colored, 59, both of Baltimore, concussion and fractured ribs and possible skull fracture.

William Donovan, 63, Alexandria, both legs broken; Von Maltje Summers, 45, of Arlington, Va., an employe of the Department of Agriculture; his sister, Miss Preston Summers, 43, Washington, and their mother, Mrs. Mary Preston Summers, Abingdon, injured near Roanoke.

Wallace Briggs, 53, Chesney, S. C., was injured in Laurel, Md., while hitch-hiking to Washington to look for a job. He was admitted to Casualty Hospital with undetermined head injuries. The driver of the car, Jesse Vermillion, Laurel, was not held.

Others Given Treatment.

William Bradley, colored, 26, 130 F street northwest, was treated at Providence Hospital for severe lacerations received in an accident at Fredericksburg, Va.

Sarah Perry, colored, 32, and James Robertson, colored, 59, both of Baltimore, were brought to Casualty from an accident near Beltsville, Md. The woman suffered a concussion and several fractured ribs, and Robertson had a possible skull fracture.

Census Bureau Plans Jobless Count in 1940

Disregards Provision for Voluntary Registration Before April 1.

What statisticians term a "real" census of the unemployed will be taken by the United States Census Bureau in 1940, it was reported here last night.

It was understood plans for it in conjunction with the regular decennial census of population are going forward regardless of the new act providing for a voluntary registration count of the jobless on or before April 1, 1938.

This was intimated in official Administration quarters yesterday as it also developed statistical experts in several interested Federal agencies are displayed with terms of the special unemployment census bill. It was passed by Congress in the closing hours of the session and subsequently received President Roosevelt's signature.

The Census Bureau, was said not to have been consulted when the special bill was drafted or in process of enactment. While the Bureau may be designated by the the President to have a hand in the taking of the 1938 unemployment count, its officials are understood to have little faith in the value of the undertaking.

The provision for a "real" unemployment census, it is pointed out, is in the existing census law going back to 1930. This law may be revised before the 1940 regular census is taken, but unless the provision is stricken out the situation as to unemployment will be sought in the personal house-to-house canvass of population.

According to the expressions today of census experts, any accurate data regarding unemployment would have to be obtained through a survey of the whole population.

Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, and representatives of the Labor Department, the WPA, the Social Security Board, the Central Statistical Board, and the Census Bureau have held informal meetings during the last week on the bill for a special count, but their net conclusion has been to await the President's return to Washington.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Imaginative Defense.

Aggressiveness is the bidding of safe hands generally pays dividends. When a trump suit has been found and the partnership is reasonably sure that a game contract cannot be badly hurt, almost any excuse is good enough to bid the game. This may have been the reason for South's game bid, despite his comparatively weak opening bid, in the hand below. His contract actually was a very sound one, and he was defeated only by a bad break coupled with imaginative defense.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of diamonds, dummy winning with the King. Declarer took stock and decided that a successful finesse in either hearts or clubs would give him his contract. Since he could not tell which finesse would work and which would not, he led the nine of hearts from the dummy at trick 2.

When South allowed the nine of hearts to ride, West won with the King, and did some thinking. From the play to the first trick it was obvious that his side could win no tricks in diamonds. Dummy's club holding and his own ill-fated King made it equally clear that there were no club tricks in store for him. With only one possible trump winner, it was obvious that three tricks had to be garnered in spades for the contract to be defeated. This could be done only if East had the doubleton King of spades.

West, therefore, played for the only hope by underleading his Ace of spades. East won with the King, and returned the suit, ruffing a third round to defeat the contract.

South could have made the contract, had he been sure that West had the King of clubs. By clearing out two rounds of trumps and refusing the trump finesse, he could have prevented East from ruffing a third round of spades. This play, however, would have been double-dummyish, and South is more to be pitied than blamed for his defeat.

Steel Activity At High Level In Past Week

Buying Is Increasing in Volume Although at a Slow Rate.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 5.—In spite of light buying, steel production is holding fairly steadily at the excellent rate prevailing through late July and August. Producers apparently are not troubled at the small current volume of bookings and are actively seeking to clear their books of backlogs, which are heavy in some products, though light in others, says Steel.

Buying is increasing in volume each week, though the change is gradual. Some automotive tonnage has been booked, though not in the volume expected later. General demand shows some signs of increased needs by miscellaneous consumers. Export inquiry is being received for various types of steel, but prices are not attractive in most instances and little is being booked.

The scrap market is weak in the face of absence of buying by tonnage consumers, but negotiations for purchase of a large tonnage for export to Europe by the scrap-buying cartel, offering a $2 advance over the last export purchase, are an element of strength if the business is closed.

Steel production last week held at 83 per cent of capacity, changes in rates at various centers being small and virtually canceling each other. Pittsburgh receded 0.4 point to 83 per cent, Chicago 0.5 point to 86, Cleveland dropped 1.5 points to 78, Birmingham 5 points to 91, Detroit 5 to 95, Cincinnati 4 to 89 and St. Louis 7 points to 77. Wheeling gained 1.5 points to 91, and New England 10 points to 70. No change was made at Youngstown, 73; Eastern Pennsylvania, 65; Buffalo, 86.

American Steel & Wire Co. has announced a quantity plan for sales of nails, staples, merchant wire, barbed and barbless wire and woven wire fencing, superseding the jobber-dealer basis in use previously. A dealer and jobber functional allowance is made on goods purchased for resale and quantity deductions are provided. The purpose is stated to protect legitimate jobber-dealer interests.

Pig iron production in August broke all records since August, 1929. The daily rate was 116,676 tons, compared with 120,845 tons in August, 1929. The daily rate was 3.3 per cent greater than in July. Total tonnage in August was 3,616,954 tons, compared with 3,746,954 tons in August, 1929, a gain of 3.3 per cent over July. For eight months total production was 26,888,648 tons, an increase of 42.4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1936.

Because of interruption of Chinese tungsten ore shipments prices of tool steels containing tungsten are to be advanced October 1 from 67 cents to 80 cents a pound, base for the grade containing 18 per cent tungsten.

Shipments of iron ore from the Lake Superior region continue to break records. Total tonnage moved to September 1 this year is 45,438,131 tons, compared with 43,717,797 tons in the corresponding period of 1929, the banner year. The August movement was 10,811,381 tons, which compares with 10,806,967 tons in August, 1929, and with 10,704,457 in July of this year.

Weak Markets Reduce Hopes of Autumn Business Expansion.

New York, Sept. 5.—Hope for a considerable increase in business and a revival of securities market activity after the Labor Day holidays was dimmed somewhat but not extinguished last week by persistent weakness in stocks, relieved by a modest recovery toward the close, a slight easing in the Government bond market, further liquidation of railroad bonds, and uncertainty in commodity markets.

The idea that inventories had been built up in the spring and early summer against a boomlet in demand which failed to appear and that as a consequence new orders were in a slump was accepted as accounting partially for the weakness. Dullness in the speculative markets was accentuated by the unusually large number of absences to escape an exceptionally warm season, and especially by the extension of the fighting in China in a manner to threaten other nations.

Hope in Farm Income.

On the war side, prophecy is futile; but it is safe to say that international trade for some months to come will be set back. The effect on our markets probably cannot be measured solely by our direct loss in trade, for the interruption to trade of other nations reflects on our markets. The tendency of capital to mobilize by withdrawing from comparatively safe areas to make up for losses in others was seen. On the favorable side, this country is still as good a place as any, if not a better one, for investment, and the certain rise in income to large sections of the farming population this autumn is encouraging. Given freedom from an extra session of Congress and lessening of war tension, trade should proceed this autumn. Bank loans for commercial purposes continue to expand, cheap money is assured and the leaven of inflation as shown by the mounting Federal deficit still is at work.

Increasing comment is being made on the failure of substantial recovery to take place in building construction, especially in residential building, which is being nursed by the Government. The considerable rise in building materials costs and the high wage levels prevailing in the building trades are mentioned as reasons for the dullness in the industry. Those factors undoubtedly are at work and certainly restrain construction by entrepreneurs who might otherwise build up residential areas in cities with the hope of "developing" them. To a large extent also the individual probably has hesitated to undertake home construction and repairs when he has inquired into costs.

Building Drags.

A good deal of residential construction, nevertheless, has taken place in other periods of high costs, even preceding boom conditions. Houses may be built upon the partial payment plan, with Government aid and with Government encouragement, at perhaps what appear to be cheaper rates than those obtainable from private interests. Still, home building, in spite of the acknowledged shortage, continues to drag. Some commentators think one powerful reason lies in the changing habits of the people, brought about partly by rising taxation and vexation in home owning and partly by the increasing amount of leisure among people of small and moderate means and partly by the Lord knows what.

Finance companies for installment selling are beginning to draw in the lines, which is all to the good on the long range, but the early effect may be to cut down trade somewhat. Added to that is the gains made by living costs on wages. On a more distant view a favorable sign is the increasing reluctance of the banks to take Government bonds, a factor which ultimately may prove to be a more potent force in swinging the budget into balance, and thereby lessening the sweep of inflation, than any economic theorizing is likely to exert.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Drop 2% in Week

New York, Sept. 5.—New York City bank stocks reacted during the past week and closed at lower levels, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster.

The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on September 3 amounted to $1,946,597,000 compared with $1,987,997,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $41,400,000, or 2.08 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 3.39 per cent compares with a yield of 3.32 per cent on August 27. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 18.8 times their known earnings compared with 19.2 times on August 27.

Advertising Gains 10% Over Year Ago

New York, Sept. 5.—With advertising space sales as a whole showing substantial further year-to-year gains in recent months, printers, publishers and printing equipment makers generally are continuing to enjoy materially increased business, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

Advertising expenditures, in the aggregate, are estimated to have increased 9 per cent to 10 per cent in the first half of 1937, compared with the corresponding 1936 period, or about the same as the advance in business activity generally.

Softwood Output Decreases in Week

The lumber industry during the week ended August 28, stood at 73 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 64 per cent of 1929 shipments.

The week's reported softwood production was 19 per cent greater than new business booked and 17 per cent heavier than reported shipments. Softwood production was slightly less, new orders and shipments were appreciably less, than in the corresponding week of 1936.

National softwood production reported for week by 9 per cent fewer mills was 8 per cent less than the softwood output of the preceding week; softwood shipments were 8 per cent less than shipments of that week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood mills.

Eastern Air Lines Sets New Records

Preliminary figures for August show Eastern Air Lines continues to establish new monthly records. The 10,365 revenue passengers carried is a gain over last August of 24 per cent. The 640,000 airplane revenue miles flown is 16 per cent increase.

A total of 4,175,000 revenue passenger miles flown is an increase of 33 per cent, according to statement yesterday by General Manager E. V. Rickenbacker.

Immigration Curb Is Seen as Wages Lifter

Higher Labor Costs Will Follow Rigid Policy, Bank Holds.

New York, Sept. 5.—With immigration reduced to a thin trickle and all alien departures in the United States actually exceeding all alien arrivals during the past year, the Index of the New York Trust Co. declares that the wages of unskilled labor are certain to rise and compel widespread readjustment of costs throughout the country.

"In view of the many disadvantages which apparently follow an extreme course—either a too rigid control of immigration or a lack of effective restriction," the bank review says, "the question arises 'would not a more moderate and possibly flexible policy tend to eliminate the difficulties and redound to the advantages of the entire present populace—labor and capital alike?' Much of our present labor force can not or will not perform certain unskilled tasks—both for reasons of lower income and prestige—yet much of the unskilled work and the productivity of the country will always depend on the performance of these tasks.

"It might be, therefore, the wiser course to permit a reasonable replenishment, related to demand, of the unskilled labor force as a basis and opportunity for a higher economic and social status for the native and older immigrant worker. Balance and moderation, in immigration as in other policies, may eventually be considered essential to the public welfare."

Electric Output Declines in Week

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended August 28 showed a decline of .4 of 1 per cent to 2,294,713,000 kilowatt hours from 2,304,032,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week, but an inerease of 8 per cent over 2,125,502,000 kilowatt hours in the like week last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Norway Trade Talks to Bring Minister to U.S.

Dr. Koht May Speak for 'Oslo Countries' to Roosevelt, Hull.

Coincident with opening of negotiations between the United States and Norway for a reciprocal trade agreement, the State Department last night announced Dr. Halvdan Koht, minister of foreign affairs for Norway, will arrive in this country October 20.

In announcing Dr. Koht's plans, the State Department made public the following statement by the Norwegian foreign office:

"If conditions in Norway or in the world permit, Foreign Minister Koht, following the meeting of the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva, intends to make a short journey to the United States in October, in the course of which he will make an official visit in Washington. The American Government has indicated that . . . President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull will welcome the opportunity to exchange views with him.

"Moreover, the foreign minister has received invitations from the Norwegian-American Chamber of Commerce in New York and from the American Scandinavian Foundation, and there is a possibility of his giving talks at a couple of American universities."
